Comptroller Rules On Pay

The Comptroller General has set new rules for crediting enlisted service for higher pay scales in the first three officer grades and promotion to the new enlisted supergrades. In a series of decisions on the new Armed Forces Pay Act, he has reaffirmed the "save-pay" benefits for active, Reserve and National Guard personnel who reenlist without a break in service. PAGE 2

Don't Cut The Marines

Citing "events in the Middle East," the Senate Appropriations Committee has told the Administration that the Marine Corps should be given at least 200,000 men in fiscal '59, instead of the proposed strength of 175,000. The Senate group stated its "clear cut intent" for the larger Leatherneck force. PAGE 3

O'Sea Allowance Changes Studied

Following quickly on the heels of a favorable Comptroller General decision, Pentagon officials are devising a new system for the payment of overseas station per diem allowances. The new system may be based upon rank, number of dependents and new cost of living indexes for overseas areas. It could mean increases for many. PAGE 3

A-Carrier Scuttled, But Polaris Pushed

The Senate Appropriations Committee agrees with the House that the Navy should be denied funds at this time for a second atomic aircraft carrier. Also concurring with the House, the Senators voted extra money for a speed-up of the Polaris and Regulus missile programs PAGE 6

$18 Billion Budget Sought For AF

If Congress endorses the recommendation of the Senate Appropriations Committee, the Air Force will be provided with a budget of $18.1 billion for the current fiscal year, compared with $17.6 billion recommended by the Administration. PAGE 8

"Startled" Colonel On Pay

Despite the emphasis on removing "inverted" pay situations through enactment of the Military Pay Act of 1958, the fact of the matter is that some officers now receive less pay than those who are their subordinates. You will want to read about this intriguing situation. PAGE 10

Marines Choose Stars And Eagles

Marine Corps selection boards have chosen eight colonels for promotion to temporary brigadier general, and 114 lieutenant colonels for promotion to colonel. This is one more selection to brigadier general than last year and 46 more to colonel. B/G's PAGE 6—Cols. PAGE 11

General Twining, "Cavalryman"

General Nathan F. Twining, JCS Chairman, has revealed why he was not commissioned originally in the cavalry, as he had hoped while a cadet at West Point. He made this disclosure during ceremonies honoring his '18 classmate, General Willard G. Wyman, USA. PAGE 21

Capitol Counsel Raises Legal Issue

Was President Eisenhower acting within the law when, at the advice of the Navy, he caused a retired military officer to be dropped from the rolls for a civilian crime? The legality of the action is questioned by a Capitol counsel, who is an authority on military manpower matters. PAGE 28

Senate Group Attacks Family Housing And Overseas Travel

The Senate Armed Services Committee has ordered the Defense Department to examine its policy permitting dependents to accompany members of the Armed Forces to overseas "areas of potential combat."

The practice should be "seriously questioned" by the Secretary of Defense, the committee declared.

In a completely unexpected move not even previously hinted at the Capitol, the committee warned that "large and vulnerable numbers of dependents stationed in potential theaters of combat might well introduce personal considerations into the minds of those who should be solely preoccupied with military operations."

The Armed Services group noted that at a single Air Force installation "within easy reach of potential enemy missiles, approximately 82 per cent of the officers and 46 per cent of the airmen are accompanied by their families. There are 3,200 high school and elementary students attending base schools—and this is an area where mobility is said to be one of the prime methods of defending the base—if 'defense' is the proper word."

In addition to urging a review of the dependent travel policy, the committee also set a 30,000-unit ceiling on the construction of military family housing during the current fiscal year and advised the Secretary of Defense to cut down on future demands for overseas family housing.

Overseas housing, the committee said, should be confined to "the minimum"

HONORED. General Willard Wyman, retiring CONARC Commander, gets the DSM (second Oak Leaf Cluster) from Secretary of the Army Brucker. Also present at the ceremony and joining with the Secretary in praising the General's service to the nation were Army Chief of Staff General Maxwell D. Taylor, Air Force Chief of Staff Nathan F. Twining, retired General Walter Bedell Smith, and Mr. Allen Dulles, CIA Director. (See Story on Page 21.)

Sen. Symington Urges Congress To Give Army Chance To Win Against Great Odds

IN a plea to better the "current unfortunate status of our small Army," Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) has attacked Congressional and Administration economy thinking which he says forces United States troops to rely on "outmoded" World War II equipment.

Speaking before the Senate 30 July, the former Secretary of the Air Force emphasized that if the necessary modernization is not provided, "we will be sending American troops into battle ill-equipped with the very things needed to insure their survival—against a well-equipped enemy determined to destroy our way of life."

"The Army of the United States is now spread, in quantity, all around the globe; in such places as Korea, West Germany, and now the Middle East," he said.

"By tradition, it is a brave Army. The other Services have more glamor and therefore get more attention, but we should never forget that our Army took over 80 per cent of all casualties in the last two wars—World War II and Korea.

"The American troops face the largest and most modern peacetime Army in the history of the world.

"If the youth of America, as represented in these traditions, are ready to fight to protect our freedom, surely we should want them to have modern equipment; and in that way give them a chance of winning against tremendous numerical odds they already face; odds which we never will be able to equal," the Senator emphasized.

"Nevertheless," he said, "this Government, in effect, has refused to give them"

JOURNAL REPORT

Next week's issue of The Journal will feature an on-the-scene report from the U. S. Air Force Academy site at Colorado Springs and the temporary facility at Lowry AFB, Colo.

Assistant Editor Daniel Z. Henkin is visiting the Academy this weekend, as preparations are being completed for the arrival of 1,100 cadets at Colorado Springs late this Summer.

NEW USAF DRESS WHITES. Col. James J. Dimel models the uniform, dress, white, approved as optional for all male Air Force personnel. It is required for specified attache officers and may be required, at the option of the Commander, for officers assigned to MAAGs and missions.

Comptroller Issues Decisions On Military Pay Act; Affects Officers, EM Credit, Save-Pay

DISPUTED areas in the new Military Pay Act of 1958 have been clarified by the Comptroller General at the request of the Pentagon.

In a series of decisions affecting both officer and enlisted personnel, the Comptroller laid out new rules governing:

- Enlisted service creditable for higher pay rates for the first three officer grades (B-136678);
- Enlisted service creditable under length of service requirements for promotion to the new E-8 and E-9 supergrades (B-136678);
- The operation of "save-pay" provisions for active enlisted personnel (B-136668); and
- The operation of "save-pay" provisions for Reserve and National Guard Personnel (B-136671).

Pentagon officials had questioned whether four types of Service could be credited toward the higher pay rates for the first three officer grades.

These types of service were: 1) active duty for training as an enlisted member; 2) active service in a dual status in the Navy or Marine Corps (as a temporary officer with a permanent enlisted rank); 3) active service as an aviation cadet prior to 4 August 1942; and active service in a dual status as aviation cadet and enlisted member prior to 4 August 1942.

Of these four, the Comptroller ruled that only active duty for training as an enlisted member could be used to qualify an officer in the first three grades for the higher pay rates. The remaining three types of active duty can not be credited toward the higher rates, he decided.

Further explaining what active service would entitle officers to the higher pay scales, the Comptroller noted that the term "active service" should be given the same meaning as is found in 10 U.S.C. 101.

Stating that "active service" means service on active duty, the pertinent code provisions note:

"(22) 'Active duty' means full-time duty in the active military service of the United States. It includes duty on the active list, full time training duty, and attendance, while in the active military service, at a school designated as a service school by law or by the Secretary of the military department concerned."

All periods of active duty specified in this law may be credited toward the four years' active service required for higher pay rates in the first three officer ranks.

Giving a broader interpretation of the eight years' cumulative service requirement for promotion to the enlisted supergrades of E-8 and E-9, the Comptroller ruled that even inactive enlisted service could qualify enlisted men for promotion to the new top grades.

Specifically, the Comptroller said that service in a dual status as an enlisted man and as a temporary officer or member of a Service Academy could be credited toward the eight year service requirement for supergrade rank.

Unlike the type of enlisted service required for higher pay for the first three officer grades, he said, the new pay act requires only "enlisted service creditable in the computation of his basic pay" for supergrade qualification.

"A man who had eight years of inactive enlisted service with no service in any other status would be entitled to eight years' credit for basic pay purposes," the Comptroller continued. "We see no reason why a man who was in an inactive status as an enlisted man . . . should be penalized while he had that

COMPTROLLER IN ACTION

The Comptroller General of the United States currently is studying questions put to him by the Pentagon on interpretation of the Military Pay Act of 1958 and benefits for Retired personnel.

Last week's issue of The Journal told how a Comptroller's ruling will pave the way for changes in overseas per diem station allowances.

The story of how the Comptroller General and the General Accounting Office work in relation to the Armed Forces will be told in a special Journal report in next week's issue.

status he served on active duty as an officer."

Basic rule proposed by the Comptroller General for the "save-pay" provisions of the new pay act is that the provision will operate as long as there is no break in service.

Thus, enlisted active personnel whose former pay would be higher than they would receive under the new rates will not suffer any financial loss if they are separated from the service and immediately reenlist.

They cannot claim the "save-pay" provision if they have any break in service of one day or more, even when they reenlist within 90 days or three months. Under previous legislation "save-pay" provisions were effective if enlisted personnel reenlisted any time within a 90-day period.

"While the service of career enlisted men usually consists of a number of separate periods of enlistment," the Comptroller noted, "it is our view that the Congress intended that the right of an enlisted man to saved pay on 1 June 1958, (effective date of the new pay law—Ed.) should continue as long as he continues to be a 'member' and without regard to the number of enlistments or reenlistments, providing a break in service of one day or more does not occur."

The "save-pay" provision, the Comptroller said, also applies to AWOL personnel who return during their period of enlistment. It does not apply to deserters.

Like their active duty counterparts, Reserve and National Guard enlisted men have also been granted the "save-pay" benefits of the new pay act as long as they remain members of the reserve components.

NEW DCNO — Admiral James S. Russell, left, takes the oath as Vice Chief of Naval Operations from RAdm. Chester C. Ward, Judge Advocate General, before Secretary of the Navy Thomas S. Gates, Jr. Admiral Russell replaced Admiral Harry D. Felt, who became Commander in Chief Pacific.

Navy Mum On How Many Captains It Will Try To Get Rid Of Under "Retention" Plan

As many as 170 four-stripe officers in year-groups 1930, 1931 and 1932 could receive letters from the Navy advising them that their continued active duty is no longer in the best interest of the Service.

As THE JOURNAL went to press, the Navy would not discuss the problem nor the captains who will be "requested" to submit resignations under the new "retention" program.

Officers who were in the zone of eligibility last year and this year for consideration to flag rank have reason to be apprehensive. In making two-star selections this year, the board, headed by VAdm. Herbert G. Hopwood, chose 30 new admirals. When the selection board completed its work 18 July, Admiral Hopwood retired from the board and turned it over to VAdm. Charles R. Wellborn who, in the words of Secretary of the Navy Thomas S. Gates, Jr., was charged with the "onerous" task of paring back the overstrength of captains.

Admiral Wellborn's board, having access to the records of the Hopwood board, continued his task through 23 July. Although more than a week has passed the recommendations which were forwarded to VAdm. Harold P. Smith, Chief of Naval Personnel, have not been made public.

The same procedure will be followed in the case of commanders being considered for captaincies. The board membership will have the dual function of making selections and making recommendations to cull out three-strippers.

The commander's board went into session 29 July. Normally, a board takes from 10 days to two weeks to make its determinations.

Still to be answered is the question how the Navy can force reluctant four-strippers to leave the Service. Since the "Hump" and "White Charger" bills were not passed at this session of Congress the Navy is bound by provisions of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947. The Navy previously went on record against using its authority to "furlough" officers. OP provides that captains and commanders have the right to complete 30 and 25 years of service, respectively.

Capt. Fredericks Takes Command of USS Wasp

Capt. E. H. C. Fredericks, USN, has relieved Capt. H. T. Utter, USN, as Commanding Officer of the 40,000-ton antisubmarine warfare carrier U.S.S. Wasp. The ship is operating in the Mediterranean with the U. S. Sixth Fleet.

Operating under a heavy schedule at sea, the customary review of the ship's company was modified for the change of command ceremony held on the hangar deck of the Wasp, with the majority of her men continuing to man their regular at-sea stations.

Rear Admiral E. A. Hannegan, USN, Commander Carrier Division FOURTEEN, whose two-star flag flies from the Wasp, was present for the ceremony.

The Wasp is serving as the hub of Task Force 66, an antisubmarine carrier task group. The task force is made up of the Wasp, her embarked air squadrons which fly specially-designed fixed-wing and helicopter antisubmarine aircraft, and seven modern Dealey-class destroyer escorts.

Captain Fredericks was born in New England, North Dakota, and is married to the former Miss Maude L. Kishler of San Diego.

Captain Utter, who had assumed command of the Wasp on 1 May, 1957, leaves the ship for duty at Field Command, Armed Forces Special Weapons Project, Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Tinker Unit To Germany

Personnel of both the returning 457th and the deploying 458th will be airlifted by MATS aircraft. The only equipment moved will be tool kits and individual clothing and equipment.

ISO At San Diego

Capt. Glenn B. Stevens will succeed Capt. Gordon F. Ogilvie as Depot Informational Services Officer at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, on 4 August.

Captain Stevens' previous assignment was as ISO for the First Marine Brigade, FMF, at Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii.

Captain Ogilvie, who served as Depot ISO from 1 May on temporary assignment, returns to his original assignment as assistant Depot adjutant.

ARADCOM BRIEFING—Several officers of the United States Army Air Defense Command chat over coffee at USARADCOM headquarters, Colorado Springs, between meetings familiarizing them with the mission, organization and weapons of the missile command. They are among the first group of newly assigned officers from units throughout the nation and from headquarters to attend such briefings, which will be held periodically. Left to right: Col. R. B. Firehock, Commander, 17th Air Defense Artillery Group; Col. Harry Hewitt, Commander, 80th Group; Col. Yale Wolfe, Commander, 28th Group; Col. Daniel A. Ranney, Deputy Chief of Staff for Administration and Logistics, Hq., and Col. G. V. Underwood, Commander, 2d Group.

MARINE CORPS CUTBACK OPPOSED

The Senate Appropriations Committee has told the Administration in no uncertain terms that the Marine Corps should not be cut below 200,000 men.

The Committee agreed with the House in approving additional funds for the Corps but went one step further by expressing its "clear cut intent" that the Corps "be maintained" at the higher strength.

Following the earlier House vote which boosted the Corps' proposed manpower ceiling, Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy said he did not consider the action a mandate from the Congress. He implied that the Administration probably would carry out its announced plan to reduce the Marines to 175,000.

The Senate Committee said "events in the Middle East during the past weeks have established beyond question, in the considered judgment of the committee, that the security of our Nation demands that the Marine Corps be maintained at a minimum strength of 200,000."

The Committee added approximately $32.4 million to the House-passed Marine Corps budget. All but a small fraction of the increase is to provide added pay costs brought about by the new Military Pay Act.

The President had requested $847.2 million for the Marine Corps. The House approved $825.1 million and the Senate group boosted the amount to $857,569,000.

The Senate Committee approved the House action in chopping $1.2 million from the Corps' permanent change of station travel account.

Pentagon Studies O'Sea Allowances In Wake Of Comptroller's Decision

Revision of the Armed Forces overseas station per diem allowances is under study by a top level Pentagon committee headed by Army Assistant Secretary Hugh M. Milton, III.

Given the go-ahead to make the changes by the Comptroller General (THE JOURNAL 26 July), the Pentagon Per Diem, Travel and Transportation Allowance Committee is developing a completely new allowance system, similar to that used by the Department of State.

It may be submitted to the Department of Defense for final approval as early as 1 September.

The new system could signal three major changes in the computation of overseas station per diem pay.

Involved is a recomputation of station per diem allowances on the basis of both grade and number of dependents. Although there may be some overlapping between the higher enlisted grades and lower officer ranks, the plan will probably provide a graduated scale of station per diem rates based upon military rank.

Basing station per diem rates upon the number of dependents would provide added benefits for large military families. The rates now cover only two categories, single or married.

As in the present system, the proposed rates would provide a sizable jump between the single and married categories. Lesser increments would be added for additional dependents, with a possible limit of five or six for whom payments could be authorized.

Third change in the plan would be an entirely new method of computing the higher cost of living in overseas areas. The present cost of overseas living is computed by the military departments from reported expenditures of individual members.

The proposed system, modeled after that used by the State Department, would establish cost of living indices based on comparative prices between the United States and overseas areas.

B/G Laux Reports As Dep. Chief, A&AFES

Brig. Gen. Ray J. Laux, USA, has reported to the New York City headquarters of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service to begin his new duties as Deputy Chief of the military post exchange system.

General Laux, a 1928 graduate of the University of Arizona, succeeds Brig. Gen. Roy T. Evans, Jr., USA, who has been assigned to the Office of the Quartermaster General in Washington, D. C.

The assignment of another Army general officer as Deputy Chief of the Exchange Service follows the procedure of joint partnership between the Army and the Air Force in providing exchange services to men in uniform in both Services. The two top-level positions are rotated between general officers of both Services. Maj. Gen. Harlan C. Parks, USAF, is Chief of the A&AFES.

General Laux assumes his new post following an assignment as Deputy Executive Director of the Military Subsistence Agency in Chicago, Ill., where he had been stationed since 1956.

Top Military Court Voids Discharge Rule

The U. S. Court of Military Appeals has voided the provision of the Manual for Courts-Martial which requires dismemorable or bad conduct discharges to accompany all courts-martial sentences or periods greater than six months. Reversing its previous decisions and the policies of the military judge advocates, the Court noted that Congress plainly contemplated that courts-martial would, in individual cases, adjudge sentence which did not include a punitive discharge but carried confinement for more than one year. In the Court's majority opinion in U. S. v. Varnadore, Judge Quinn wrote that the general Manual provisions which imposes punitive discharges with all sentences over six months "destroys a right granted by Congress to the vast majority of persons subject to the Uniform Code." The Court concluded "that it is not illegal for a court-martial to impose a sentence to confinement in excess of six months without also adjudging a punitive discharge."

"True," Judge Quinn said, "an accused sentenced to an extended period of confinement is worthless, and perhaps even liability, to the Services. However, in those instances, the Services can separate the accused from the Service administratively."

In the Varnadore case, the accused had been convicted of unauthorized absence for 14 months. The USCMA opinion centered about the Law Officer's instruction to the court-martial that "Any period of confinement greater than six months without being accompanied by a punitive discharge is an illegal sentence."

Model (simplified) illustrates basic structure of magnetic "Twistor" memory—magnetic and copper wires interwoven as in a window screen. Twisted condition of the magnetic wire shifts preferred direction of magnetization from a longitudinal to a helical path. One inch of twisted wire, thinner than a hair, can store as much information as ten ferrite rings. "Twistor" was invented at Bell Telephone Laboratories by Andrew Bobeck, M.S. in E.E. from Purdue University.

New twist in memory devices

An ingenious new kind of magnetic memory has been developed by Bell Telephone Laboratories scientists for the storage of digital information. Known as the "Twistor," it consists basically of copper wires interwoven with magnetic wires to form a grid.

"Twistor" gets its name from a characteristic of wire made of magnetic material. Torsion applied to such a wire shifts the preferred direction of magnetization from a longitudinal to a helical path. This helical magnetization has been applied to produce a magnetic storage device of unprecedented capacity for its size.

In a magnetic memory, information is stored by magnetizing a storage element. In conventional memories the storage elements consist of rings of ferrite. In the "Twistor," they consist of tiny segments of hair-thin magnetic wire. At each intersection of the grid, one such segment is capable of storing a binary digit.

The "Twistor" is simple and economical to fabricate, and its minute energy requirements are easily supplied by transistor circuits. Bell Laboratories engineers see important uses for it in future telephone systems which demand the compact storage of much information, as well as in digital computers for civilian and military applications.

Marine Board Chooses Eight For Star; Twenty-Nine Are Passed Over For First Time

A MARINE Corps selection board has chosen eight colonels—one more than named by last year's board—for advancement to one-star rank.

Lt. Gen. Pollock

In making selections of unrestricted officers, the board, headed by Lt. Gen. Edwin A. Pollock, Commanding General, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic, picked six colonels from a 35-man promotion zone and one from above the zone.

In addition to the seven unrestricted officers named this year, the board chose one Supply Duty Only officer from a position 21 names below the zone anchor man. Since there were no SDO's in the official promotion zone, Supply officers not selected are not considered to have been passed over.

SDO's were chosen from the eligibility zone which included all officers with dates of rank as colonel from 1 July 1956 and earlier.

The Fiscal Year 1957 board chose a total of 10 officers, while the Fiscal Year 1956 and 1955 boards each selected 13 for brigadier's stars.

The in-zone selection percentage amounts to 17.1, with 29 colonels being passed over for the first time. The passover rate is 4% less than last year's rate, when 86.9% of the in-zone officers failed to win promotion.

Col. Frederick E. Leek was the only pilot selected. There were five Naval Aviators in the zone which extended from Col. Herman Nickerson, jr., Lineal No. 106, through Col. Jack Tabor, Lineal No. 142, in the 1 January 1958 combined Lineal List.

This is the youngest group of officers named for three years. The average age of the selectees is 45.4. The general-designees range in age from 43 to 51. Average age of the officers named by last year's board was 45.7. In Fiscal Year 1957 the average age was slightly over 47.

The youngest officer named this year is Colonel Leek, who will be 44 on 12 October. The oldest is Col. Philip W. John, the lone SDO selectee, who celebrated his 51st birthday on 10 June. Two officers are 46, two, 45; and two, 44.

All officers are from year group 1935, with the exception of Col. Henry W. Buse, jr., who was chosen from a position 23 names above the senior man in the zone. His rank as an officer dates from 31 May 1934.

Six of the eight have held the rank of colonel since 1 January 1951. Colonel Nickerson's rank dates from 1 July 1950 and Col. Buse's from 1 July 1949.

A further analysis of the Combined List reveals that 28 colonels have been passed over for the second time, including 12 Naval Aviators.

Headquarters said that one vacancy currently exists for advancement of the senior selectee, Col. Henry W. Buse. He will be promoted as soon as he completes his physical examination.

Here is a lineal list of the selectees, who were nominated by President Eisenhower 25 July, their present assignments and a thumbnail sketch of their careers:

Col. Henry W. Buse, Chief of Staff, FMF, Atlantic, Norfolk. Born 10 April 1912, Ridley Park, Pa., he was commissioned in the Corps following his USNA '34 graduation. He won the Silver Star and two Bronze Stars for WWII combat. He served with the 1st Marine Division in Korea in 1952. Before assuming his present post, he served at Headquarters and at the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico.

Col. Herman Nickerson, Staff, CG, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic. He was born 30 July 1913 and commissioned in 1935 after completing studies at the University of Boston. He holds the DSC, Silver Star and Legion of Merit for service during WWII and Korea.

Col. William J. Van Ryzin, Secretary of the General Staff, HQMC. Born 20 March 1914, in Appleton, Wis., he won his commission in July 1935 following graduation from the University of Wisconsin. He resides with his wife, Evelyn, and two children, at 4012 N. Woodstock St., Arlington, Va.

Col. Raymond L. Murray, C of S, MCB, Camp Lejeune, N. C. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., on 30 June 1913, he was commissioned in 1935 following graduation from Texas A&M. For service during WWII and Korea, he received two Navy Crosses, one DSC, four Silver Star Medals and one Legion of Merit. The Colonel and his wife, Evelyn, have five children.

Col. Thomas F. Riley, C of S, MCB, Camp Pendleton, Calif. He was born in Harrisonburg, Va., 6 July 1912. A graduate of the Virginia Military Institute, he was commissioned in 1935. Before taking his present post, he served with the G-4 Division at HQMC.

Col. Frederick E. Leek, Chief of Staff, MARC, Glenview, Ill. He was born 12 Oct. 1914, in Stockton, Calif. Commissioned in 1936, the Colonel won his wings in 1943. A graduate of the University of California, he won his Master's Degree from the University of New Mexico. He holds the Legion of Merit, three DFC's and nine Air Medals.

Col. Odell M. Conoley, assigned to Marine Corps Schools. Born 9 Nov. 1913, in Amarillo, Tex., he was commissioned following graduation from Texas A&M in 1935. He earned the Navy Cross and Silver Star for WWII service.

Col. Philip W. John, Staff, Quartermaster General, HQMC. Born 10 June 1907 in Seattle, Wash., he enlisted in the Marine Reserve in 1930 and was commissioned in 1935. He resides with his wife, Patricia, and two children at 3080 N. Oakland St., Arlington, Va.

Secretary Gates States His Views On Four-Stripe Retention Action

The following is the text of the communication from Secretary of the Navy Thomas S. Gates, jr., to VAdm. Charles Wellborn, USN, Commandant of the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, who headed the board which considered Navy captains for retention.

YOU have been appointed senior member of a board directed to recommend certain officers in the grade of Captain in the Navy for retention and continued active service in that grade.

The Board has further been directed to establish a list of officers not so recommended, in such form that it may be the basis for a priority list of officers whose voluntary retirement should be solicited, as the needs of the Navy and the equity of individuals may dictate.

The experience and the average chronological age of officers promoted to the grades of Commander, Captain and Admiral must be those which best meet the requirements of the Navy. This implies:

(A) Average age in each grade suitable for combat stress.

(B) Age and experience best suited for effective service with other military components on Joint Staffs and Command Organizations.

(C) Age in grade commensurate with that of the other services, for reasons of equity and career attractiveness.

With the advice and concurrence of the Chief of Naval Operations, I have conducted studies of the present and future situation in relation to promotion flow and have found that unless something is done immediately the Navy will face massive stagnation in these three critical senior ranks. This stagnation will be cumulative and will be so widespread as to threaten the morale and effectiveness of the entire Officer Corps. This we cannot accept at a time when the Navy must be maintained in the most advanced state of combat readiness.

Acting on these considerations, with the advice and concurrence of the Chief of Naval Operations, I have determined as a policy goal that the first selection point for Commanders, Captains, and Admirals should be in their sixteenth, twenty-first, and twenty-fifth year of service, respectively.

To maintain this promotion flow now and for the future, in the grades affected by the great numbers of officers in the year-groups first commissioned in World War II, will require severe forced attrition in those groups. It will require also, in equity and to meet the paramount needs of the service, that the problem be shared in part by our more senior Captains. This is the task to which the Board must address itself. I, therefore, have asked that the Board review the records of all Captains in year-groups 1930, 1931, and 1932, and the restricted line in 1929.

I have arrived at these policies only after mature consideration over a period of years. In the main, we will be obliged to ask officers of long and honorable service to step aside, in spite of their ability to contribute, so that officers more junior may have the opportunity to make greater contributions during their careers. Such action cannot reflect adversely on those officers, but rather affirm their patriotism and devotion to the service.

As a separate task, related to the objective, but on an entirely different basis, I have further asked that the Board compile a list of any Captains of year-groups junior to the above with at least five years in grade as of 1 July 1959 whose performance may be considered sub-standard.

Your task will be difficult and may be onerous. I am confident that the traditional standards of statutory selection boards will apply to your administrative proceedings. I assure you of my support in your findings.

VAdm. Wellborn

Second A-Carrier Turned Down By Senate; OK Speed-Up Of Polaris, Regulus Programs

Taking its lead from earlier House action, the Senate Appropriations Committee has turned thumbs down on new funds for a second atomic-powered aircraft carrier.

It voted an additional $69 million, however, for the construction of two new ships not approved by the House (an amphibious assault ship and an amphibious transport, dock), and $13 million to complete two destroyer escorts which the Navy had planned to cancel because of lack of funds.

The Senate group agreed to the House action in voting extra money to accelerate the Polaris and Regulus missile programs.

The fiscal '59 Navy budget approved by the Committee is approximately $349.5 million more than the amount approved by the House. The Administration had asked for $10,022,937,000 for the Navy; the House approved $10,217,027,000 and the Senate added additional funds to bring the total to $10,566,504,000.

About $117.5 million of the amount is for increased pay costs.

The Committee also:

- Agreed to House action in wiping out $2 million for administrative-type aircraft, but substantially restored House reductions made in funds for procurement of aircraft initial spares to the extent of $136.3 million.

- Restored $10 million for flight operations and aircraft overhaul.

Col. Thomason's "Few Marines" Goes To Press

A new edition of Col. John W. Thomason's short story collection, "and a Few Marines," has been published and is available from the Marine Corps Gazette Bookshop, Box 1844, Quantico, Va.

Marine Corps Commandant General Randolph McC. Pate, who wrote the forward to the new edition, noted: "I am delighted to see 'and a Few Marines' again in print. There is no question that it includes John Thomason's best, and that is the finest recommendation I can give it."

Senate Action Restores Some Cuts; Gives Air Force $18 Billion; Boosts Plane Outlay

MORE than $843.8 million has been added to the fiscal '59 Air Force budget by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The increased funds include $340.3 million for additional bombers, tankers and airlift, and $18.3 million for 30 F-27 high wing pressurized turboprop jet transports.

The Committee voted a total of $18,161,618,000 for the Air Force, compared with $17.3 billion approved by the House and $17.6 billion recommended by the Administration.

Two items chopped out by the House and restored by the Senate group are $21.8 million for jet training aircraft and $190 million for procurement of initial spares for aircraft.

The Senate also added $196 million for increased pay resulting from the new Military Pay Act, and approved an increase of 35 passenger carrying vehicles over the number provided by the House.

In other actions, the Committee:

- Provided that no part of the $743 million Air Force R&D fund "shall be used for construction, maintenance, or rental of missile testing facilities until the full use is made of testing facilities and equipment at Air Force Missile Development Center, Holloman AFB, N. M., and such other installations where missile or rocket research and testing is now being carried out."

- Advised MATS that $84 million of its funds cannot be used for any purpose except "procurement of commercial service" from private airlines, and $21 million of this amount must go to U. S. "civil air carriers which qualify as small business enterprises."

- Suggested that the Air Force "should immediately investigate" strategic airlift requirements and let Congress know how much money is needed "to purchase a cargo aircraft expressly designed to meet those requirements." The Committee said "the present Air Force inventory is tragically lacking in the right type of cargo airplane."

- Criticized the Air Force for "a growing lack of energy" in space activities, and urged a survey of R&D bases "with a view to utilizing one or more of these installations as a laboratory for space biology and biodynamics."

- Announced plans to "examine the organizational structure of the Air Research and Development Command with particular reference to duplication in activities and missions." The Committee said it is taking this step "in order to assist in providing the fullest use of those existing facilities capable of competing in the space programs of today."

NCO Academy Commandant

Lt. Col. Frank C. Libuse has been named Commandant of the 15th Air Force NCO Academy at March AFB, Calif., replacing Lt. Col. Ross D. Annis, who will attend the University of Southern California at Los Angeles for one year.

AF Sets Dates For E-8 Retesting

The Air Force has designated 13 October-21 November as the retesting period during which the Supervisor Examination will be given to master sergeants who did not achieve a satisfactory score during the May-June testing period.

Achievement of a satisfactory score is a prerequisite for promotion to E-8. Eligibility criteria is possession of a 7-level AFSC and 24 months in E-7 grade, with 10 years' active military service as of 1 March 1959.

Individuals who are eligible and who were not previously tested may take the test during the new period, if they desire.

SPECIAL WEAPONS WINNERS—These pilots from the 31st Tactical Fighter Wing, Turner AFB, Ga., (left to right) 1st Lt. Harold A. Homan, Maj. Arthur H. Johnson, Col. Gordon M. Graham, Capt. Walter S. Bruce and 1st Lt. Dewey E. Gallops won the Special Weapons trophy in the 1958 TAC WILLIAM TELL bombing and gunnery meet at George AFB, Calif.

TOPS IN CONVENTIONAL WEAPONS—These pilots from the 4th Tactical Fighter Wing, Seymour Johnson AFB, N. C. (left to right) Maj. Lawrence N. Guarino, Capt. Garry A. Willard, Jr., Col. Timothy O'Keefe, Capt. Ulie H. Jeffers, Jr., and Capt. Daniel C. Doube won the conventional weapons trophy in the 1958 TAC WILLIAM TELL bombing and gunnery meet held at George AFB, Calif. Captain Jeffers won top individual honors in conventional weapons.

Seymour-Johnson, Turner Hot Shots Take The Apples At "William Tell"

The 4th Tactical Fighter Wing from Seymour-Johnson AFB, N. C., tops in conventional weapons, and the 31st Tactical Fighter Wing from Turner AFB, Ga., winner in the special weapons category, will represent the Tactical Air Command 13-18 October at the Air Force's 1958 worldwide bombing and gunnery meet at Nellis AFB, Nev.

They came out first during TAC's first supersonic bombing and gunnery competition, "William Tell," held last week at George AFB, Calif.

The top individual scorer in the meet and in conventional weapons was Capt. Ulie H. "Jeff" Jeffers.

Capt. Walter S. Bruce, from the 31st

TFW, was the individual leader in the special weapons phase.

Maj. Arthur H. Johnson, second in special weapons, named the secret of the success when he said, "We had no malfunctions in the aircraft, no aborts and we made all the target times and schedules."

General Otto P. Weyland, TAC Commander, awarded trophies to the winning team and top competitors in each of the divisions. There were trophies for pilots and ground crews alike. Remarked Captain Jeffers, "That's the way it should be."

The other teams that participated in the meet were the 27th TFW from Bergstrom AFB, Tex., and the 479th TFW from George AFB.

Secretary Douglas Hits Academy Criticism, Answers Charges Made By House Committee

Secretary of the Air Force James H. Douglas, in a 28-page document, has presented a forceful rebuttal to charges made by the House Appropriations that construction of the Air Force Academy has been characterized by "costly and inadequate planning."

He called "grossly excessive" an estimate of a Congressional staff group that the Academy would cost "at least $300,900,757."

The Committee fixed a ceiling of a $139 million on the Academy cost.

Secretary Douglas recalled that former Secretary of the Air Force Harold E. Talbott had advised Congress initially that the cost would be between $125 and $145 million, and later, in 1954, revised the estimate to a possible outlay of $175 million.

Secretary Douglas said the present estimate "is that the total construction funds to be expended on the Air Force Academy will not exceed $160 million," of which about $25 million represents rising construction costs during the past four years.

The total cost of construction, equipping and furnish the Academy, said Secretary Douglas, will not exceed $190 million from funds appropriated to the Air Force. Responding to the free swinging Appropriations Committee criticism, Secretary Douglas declared:

"It should be emphasized that within the $135 million which has been authorized and appropriated by the Congress the Air Force has been able to construct an Academy which will open with 1100 cadets in attendance in September of this year.

"This situation does not justify the charge that the Air Force has exercised little, if any, control to keep the design and plans in reasonable relation to the authorized program."

The Secretary made the point that "there has been no precedent for the construction, as a single project, of an educational entity of the scope and magnitude of the Air Force Academy."

He told Congress that replacement of the facilities at West Point or Annapolis "would cost substantially more than being spent on the Air Force Academy."

This does not include, of course, cost of aircraft assigned to the Academy, 1200 units of Capehart Housing that require expenditure of $19,441,000, to be compensated by quarters allowances over 25 years.

Lt. Col. Schneider Gets Sqdn; He Holds Many Medals

Lt. Col. Edwin A. Schneider has been named to command the 86th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, combat arm of the 79th Fighter Group (Air Defense) at Youngstown Municipal Airport, Ohio. During one WWII combat mission over New Guinea, Colonel Schneider shot down two Japanese zeros and a two-engine bomber. The feat was recognized by Air Force officials who presented the colonel with the Silver Star. He added another Silver Star in late 1943, when he shot down a second Japanese bomber.

The highest Air Force decoration for gallantry in combat, the DFC, with two Oak Leaf Clusters was awarded Colonel Schneider after he had completed 262 ground support, escort and air defense combat missions.

During the Korean conflict, Colonel Schneider was presented the Bronze Star Medal for Meritorious Service as chief of air defense for the 5th Air Force, then at Seoul. He also holds the Unit Citation with two Oak Leaf Clusters given for World War II and Korea duty.

TWO TOP INFORMATION OFFICERS RETIRE

Col. William Westlake and Col. Clarke Newlon, who have had key roles in building the Air Force Information Services, retired 31 July. Both plan to remain in Washington, D. C., as free lance writers and public relations consultants.

Colonel Westlake, who learned to fly as an Aviation Cadet in 1918, was Chief of Information for General H. H. Arnold during most of WWII. He had been a longtime aviation writer in Chicago. Colonel Westlake's last active duty assignment was as Executive Secretary of the Reserve Policy Committee at USAF Headquarters.

Colonel Newlon, also a veteran newsman, was sent to Europe early in WWII on an important information assignment by Colonel Westlake. He won the Bronze Star at the war's end when he led a bomb damage survey that jeaped 16 miles through a German division.

After a number of key postwar information assignments at Wiesbaden, Germany, NATO Headquarters and the Pentagon, Colonel Newlon retired as Assistant to the Director of the Office of Information Services at USAF Headquarters.

Colonel Newlon holds the distinction of being the first jet passenger to fly the Atlantic. He rode in a T-33 piloted by the late Col. Dave Schilling in 1949.

MATS And The Airlines

The emphatic statement by General Nathan F. Twining, JCS Chairman (Page 27), that provision of additional airlift for the Armed Forces holds a relatively low priority makes all the more critical the need to attain maximum readiness of all available airlift resources, military and civilian. On the one hand, there is the urgent requirement, as stressed by General Curtis E. LeMay, Air Force Vice Chief of Staff, in recent Congressional testimony (THE JOURNAL 19 July) to insure the combat readiness of the Military Air Transport Service. Secondly, the Services in the future must be able to count even more heavily than in the past on the support of civilian airlines to meet National Defense requirements.

MATS readiness depends, as General LeMay pointed out, on daily flights over global routes, carrying passengers and cargo. It would be unthinkable from a taxpayer's point of view—let alone the military need—to have these aircraft fly empty.

The lack of jet transports in MATS will be alleviated to some extent as the civilian airlines move into jet operations, with their aircraft ready for any military missions that would be necessary in an emergency.

The critical attitude of some civilian carriers to operations of MATS and the constant necessity for Air Force leaders to defend airlift operations must be replaced by the closest possible cooperation between the Services and Industry. This has been recognized by Lt. Gen. William H. Tunner, the new MATS Commander. He has developed plans for a series of meetings with officials of the civilian airlines and has instructed his staff people to work closely with people in the airlines who are performing related duties.

We feel certain that this exchange-of-ideas effort will pay large dividends in strengthening the Nation's readiness to meet airlift demands.

The vital role of airlift in National Defense has been demonstrated again in the Middle East crisis in transporting troops and supplies to Lebanon. Also, when Jordan suffered an acute oil shortage the Air Force set up an emergency airlift to keep up the supplies until truck tankers could bring the fuel from Acaba.

Despite the present official attitude as expressed by General Twining, the Senate Appropriations Committee has reported that the "present Air Force inventory is tragically lacking in the right type of cargo plane." As THE JOURNAL pointed out editorially in its 21 June issue, our military airlift needs particularly to be strengthened in its cargo carrying facilities. Large, modern cargo carrying aircraft which are available now from manufacturers not only would increase the capacity of our airlift and strengthen our combat capacity in every category from foot soldiers to missiles, but also would be cheaper in providing higher performance at lower maintenance costs.

With General Tunner's program of closer liaison with the airlines plus the Senate Committee's boost in the cargo category, the outlook for a more adequate airlift is showing signs of improvement.

The Death Of Capt. Kincheloe—A National Loss

Seldom has a military man contributed so greatly to the future defense of his nation in such a short period of time as did the late Capt. Ivan C. Kincheloe, jr. Captain Kincheloe joined the Air Force only nine years ago when, at the age of 21, he was graduated from Purdue with degrees in mechanical and aeronautical engineering.

As a combat pilot in Korea he flew 101 combat missions in F-86 Sabrejets and 30 in F-80's, becoming the United States' tenth jet ace and winning the Silver Star, the Distinguished Flying Cross with two Oak Leaf clusters, and four Air Medals.

With the experience of this distinguished combat record and his training as an aeronautical engineer, young Kincheloe entered the test pilot field and contributed immeasurably to the development of weapons of the future. As a project pilot on the famed Bell X-2 he established a world altitude record of 126,000 feet and gathered data and experience to guide design engineers in the development of higher performance aircraft. He also served as project officer on the F-106, he was one of the project officers on the F-104, and he took part in the development of the F-100.

His position in the forefront of his field led the Air Force to select him to be the pilot to take the forthcoming North American X-15 experimental rocket plane into outer space. To this end he had been undergoing special tests and training to fit him for this pioneering task.

Captain Kincheloe died contributing to the aeronautical developments to which he was so devoted. His plane crashed just as he was taking off to serve as a chase plane for an unidentified new aircraft. As a chase pilot he not only kept sharp his skills in high performance aircraft, but he also was of great assistance to the pilot of the principal plane whom he would talk and advise over his radio.

Captain Kincheloe, says the Air Force Chief of Staff General Thomas D. White, exemplified the aggressive spirit which has made our country strong and kept the nation free.

A Colonel Who Is "Startled" Gives Some Interesting Views On New Pay

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I certainly appreciate the recent pay increase; don't doubt that. However, I'm positive that we could have had a better pay structure on which to base these increases.

At the time Mr. Cordiner announced his pay proposals many of us applauded his "anti-Methuselah" approach to the pay structure. His proposals would have recognized, by pay, the merit promotion system of choosing outstanding people for early promotion, with pay increases for years in grade up to a reasonable number of years. Many of us thought that this was a far better scheme than the Congressional "historic longevity" approach, wherein one is paid by the number of years he performed well enough on an active status not to get "busted out," and also gets paid for not performing, but for being old enough to have served many years as an inactive reservist pre-World War II.

Recently, in this command, a lieutenant colonel was promoted to colonel, almost a full 7 years after I was promoted to the same grade. Under the Cordiner proposals of pay based upon time in grade I would be paid $115 per month more than he upon his promotion—a fair enough deal, you might say, in recognition of seven years of seniority. However, he is actually paid $125 per month more than I on the day he is promoted. With seven years difference in rank, my having carried the responsibility for that period, and the possibility of my being his boss, such pay differential can hardly be rationalized. He is being paid on the 26-year basis, I am on the 20; he has only 15 years active service, I have 20. To top it all off, his "eagles" did not come the "best-qualified" way on temporary promotion, but by way of a promotion to permanent rank—based upon age alone, since he is an integrated RA officer, and jumped several Lieutenant Colonels in this command who were, at the time, senior to him. This then caused me to research the pay, rank, and active service situation of the 15 Colonels in this command. The result was startling!! Here it is:

	D/R	Pay	Active Duty Years
1.	Dec. 50	800	16
2.	Jun. 51	910	24
3.	Jun. 51	910	22
4.	Jun. 51	860	20
5.	Jan. 53	840	18
6.	Mar. 53	910	18
7.	Aug. 53	985	20
8.	Aug. 53	985	20
9.	Sep. 54	985	16
10.	Nov. 54	985	15
11.	Dec. 54	985	17
12.	Dec. 54	985	18
13.	Dec. 54	985	19
14.	Jan. 55	800	17
15.	Jun. 58	985	15

#1 is the boss of #8—but draws $185 per mo. less.

#5 is the boss of #10—but draws $145 per mo. less.

#2 is the boss of #15—but draws $75 per mo. less.

#1 draws less money than all but juniors except #14.

#2 and #3 draw less money than eight juniors.

#4, #5, and #6 draw less money than nine of their juniors.

Pretty startling! It certainly is when you consider that I have researched for unusual situations, have used the situation as it actually exists, comparing all colonels assigned to this command.

Startling is right! Of the nine juniors, eight draw greater pay than the six senior, with up to 7½ years difference in seniority—and with a little as 15 years active service compared with 18, 20, 22, and 24 years active service.

To top it all off, some of these junior people can retire with 30-year benefits (75% of maximum pay) at only 20 years active service.

I know that some will say that an early promotion allowed me to draw higher pay earlier so I am better off dollar-wise than that individual promoted in June. I looked into this from the day I was promoted to Colonel to the day the other individual retires—a 13-year span. Under actual circumstances, using the old and new pay rates, he earns some $3,500 more than I do. Under the new pay scale over the entire period he earns some $6,500 more.

The situation outlined is even worse than under previous pay provisions. How can one possibly justify less pay for those carrying the responsibility? And how can one justify a system that allows this to come about by merit performance?

This situation could not have come about under the Cordiner Plan. I knew what he was doing.

SENATOR PREDICTS 1-UNIFORM, 1-SERVICE

Senator Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) thinks the Pentagon Reorganization Plan is "a step in the right direction" and believes that "in the next Congress we may be able to take another step along the road."

He told the Senate that "the ultimate organization of the Armed Services must be one military, one uniform, a General Staff, and a Chief of Staff, surrounded by proper civilian protection and surrounded by Congress and the President, so as to eliminate any chances that there might occur what some people seem to think could possibly occur under such a system."

The final reorganization decision, he said, will not be popular because it "will necessarily recognize the air as our weapon and also place responsibilities for its use in such a clear fashion that one service will emerge in a dominant role in its use."

Senator Goldwater is a Colonel in the Air Force Reserves.

Marines Choose 114 For Eagle Rank; Fiscal '59 Pass-Over Rate Jumps 8%

The pass-over rate to colonel jumped more than 8% as the Fiscal Year '59 Marine Corps selection board chose 103 lieutenant colonels for increased rank from a 189-officer zone.

At the same time, the board reached above the zone to pick 11 officers previously passed over, bringing the total number named for eagles to 114.

This year's board, headed by Maj. Gen. Thomas A. Wornham, Commanding General, Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, passed over 45.5% of the officers in the zone. Last year, the colonel's board passed over 37.4% of the in-zone officers. This is the fourth year in a row that the selection rate to the rank of colonel has declined.

The selection percentage this year is 54.5%. Last year, 62.6% of the zone officers were named for advancement. The Fiscal Year 1957 board chose 62.8%, and the Fiscal Year 1956 board 66.0%.

The slow-down in promotion opportunity for lieutenant colonels results from a "hump" situation in the rank of colonel.

Brig. Gen. Donald M. Weller is currently on Special Assignment at Headquarters heading a board which is reviewing the entire structure of the officer ranks and devising means to overcome the problem.

In making its selections, the board chose 18 of 34 Naval Aviators from the zone—a selection rate of 52.9%. The pass-over ratio is 47.1%. Last year, the board picked 18 of 22 in-zone pilots—a passover rate of 25 per cent.

Four of the 11 unrestricted officers named from above the zone by this year's board are NA's.

Selection of non-pilot unrestricted officers this year amounted to 53.8 per cent, with 77 of 143 being chosen.

In-zone Supply Duty Only officers fared best. The board named eight of 12 at a 66% selection rate. This is a complete reversal of last year's SDO selections when 66% were passed over. Last year, however, only two SDO's were named out of six eligibles in the zone.

Three of the officers named from above the zone have been serving in the rank of lieutenant colonel since 1947 and were commissioned in 1939. Of the remaining eight picked above the zone, four have held their present rank from 1948 and four from 1949, with original commissioning dates from 1940.

Included in the zone is one officer who was first commissioned in 1937, four who have been officers since 1938, 10 since 1939 and 25 since 1940. The remaining officers have held commissions since 1941. Thirteen have been lieutenant colonels since 1949, 17 since 1950, and the remainder since 1951.

The zone extended from Lt. Col. Thomas J. O'Connor, Lineal No. 108, through Lt. Col. Meryl F. Kurr, Lineal No. 301, in the 1 Jan. 1958 Combined Lineal List.

Swift promotions are in prospect for about 30 officers for whom vacancies exist. All officers through Lt. Col. William P. Pala, Lineal No. 181 have been ordered to take immediate physical examinations to qualify for advancement. The next 25 on the selection list will take physicals during January and the remaining officers in April.

Only 11 of the selectees are graduates of the U. S. Naval Academy.

Middle East Crisis Confronts Navy Relief Society With Increased Needs

INCREASED separation of Navy and Marine Corps families as a result of the Middle East crisis will impose new demands upon the Navy Relief Society.

Initial estimates are that $250,000,000 or more will be required to meet the new problem.

Already the leader among Service aid societies in the amount of financial assistance given annually—over $5.27 million in loans and grants during 1957—the Society foresees drastically increased demands upon its services if U. S. participation in the Middle East enlarges.

"We have no budget," VAdm. V. R. Murphy, USN, Ret., NRS Executive Vice President, told THE JOURNAL.

He said the Society would not be limited in the amount of aid disbursed.

Admiral Murphy noted that the Society would spend every cent available to it, including any or all of its capital assets, if this were necessary to meet the legitimate emergency needs of Navy and Marine Corps families.

Steady Increase Cited

Even before the events which thrust the U. S. into the Middle East, Society officials had anticipated substantially increased demands upon its services. The crisis can only aggravate the already serious emergency situations existing among Service families.

Admiral Murphy explained that most emergency financial assistance will go to personnel in the lower enlisted pay grades.

A Matter Of Concern

The necessary increase in financial assistance, particularly in the form of loans for ordinary living expenses, a recent Society report stated, "is a matter of some concern. It is a product of many factors, not the least of which is the inescapable fact that Service pay is definitely on the low side, particularly in the face of higher living costs and ever-rising living standards."

"For married families in the lower pay grades," the report continued, "it is a precarious existence at best."

"The new pay bill," Admiral Murphy said, will have "no appreciable effect" on NRS Services.

Before the Armed Forces Medicare program began, the principal demand upon the Society had been for medical assistance to Navy and Marine Corps families when government facilities were not available, and assistance to the families of deceased personnel.

Although there has been some reduction in medical assistance by the Society, the medical case load is still relatively high. "There are still many cases—some of them catastrophic—not covered in the new program," Society officials assert. "And there continue to be heavy expenses, such as care of children while the mother is ill, transportation to hospitals, special nurses and other charge incident to sickness which are not met by the government."

Eligible For Aid

Those eligible for Navy Relief Society aid include all Navy personnel on extended active duty, retired personnel and the families of deceased personnel.

Society aid is given in the form of either loans or grants, some of which total many thousands of dollars. In 1957 alone, NRS grants amounted to over $710,000.

Besides financial assistance, NRS offers many other services not involving the direct expenditure of money. These include a visiting nurse service, advice and information on government benefits and general advice for Navy and Marine Corps families. There were 48,983 of these service cases in 1957.

President Holds Honorary Office

In addition to Admiral Murphy, NRS officers include: President Eisenhower, Honorary President; Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, Chief of Naval Operations, President; Admiral H. R. Starke, USN, Ret., Second Vice President; Mrs. Albert G. Mumma, Third Vice President; Capt. E. S. Earnhardt, USN, Ret., Secretary and Treasurer; Mr. John W. Jackson, Legal Advisor; and Mr. John F. Sullivan, Financial Advisor.

Members of Board

Members of the NRS Board of Managers include: Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, President; VAdm. Murphy, Executive Vice President; General R. McC. Pate, USMC, Commandant, U. S. Marine Corps; VAdm. H. P. Smith, USN, Chief of Naval Personnel; RAdm. B. W. Hogan, USN, Chief of Bureau of Medicine and Surgery; RAdm. R. J. Arnold, USN, Chief of Bureau of Supplies and Accounts; RAdm. E. B. Harp, USN, Chief of Chaplains; Capt. E. S. Earnhardt, Secretary and Treasurer; Mrs. Randolph McC. Pate; Mrs. Armand M. Morgan; Admiral H. R. Stark, USN, Ret.; Admiral A. S. Carpenter, USN, Ret.; Mrs. Albert G. Mumma; Mrs. Roland N. Smoot; VAdm. W. T. Brown, USN, Ret.; Mrs. Harold P. Smith; RAdm. Marshall E. Dornin, USN.

THE SERVICES WILL HAIL the bold reply made by Secretary of the Air Force Douglas (Page 8) to the blunderbuss criticism of the House Appropriations Committee concerning construction of the Air Force Academy. Too often, Service Secretaries take the position that it is politic not to ruffle the feelings of the legislators by answering Congressional charges outside of a Capitol hearing. Knowing, however, how difficult it is for the facts to catch up with the charges, Secretary Douglas quickly made available a detailed report responding to the Appropriations Committee criticism.

THE HOUSE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE chose not to make public in connection with its report on Air Force Academy construction, estimates which show that the present replacement cost of West Point is about $480 million. It is estimated that about $300 million would be needed to build a new Naval Academy. The figures were obtained by the Air Force and were presented to the Committee as a comparison guide.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED to the proficiency pay project which has been in the works for more than one year? One explanation put forward, informally, at the Pentagon is that it is being "bureaucratized."

WHEN REPLACEMENT PASSENGER CARS are requested for top officials and officers of the Armed Forces, Congress more often than not gets out its axe and starts chopping. This year, however, the Senate Appropriations Committee took an opposite tack in at least one case. The Committee recommended "that the Department of the Navy provide the Capitol physician with a new vehicle." The official car of the Capitol Hill doctor, RAdm. George W. Calver, MC, USN-Ret., is a 1950 Chrysler which has rolled up more than 130,000 miles. Admiral Calver, who will be 71 in November, has served at the Capitol since 1928 when the Congress passed special legislation to keep him on after what started out as a normal, three-year Navy assignment. He was retired from the Navy in 1947.

AIR FORCE LEADERS are hopeful that the AF Society drive, which began 28 July, will see a reversal of the downward trend in contributions. Membership donations last year were $672,241, compared with $900,201 in 1956. Details of the AF Society program were told in a special Journal report in the issue of 19 July.

THE 300 NAVAL ACADEMY MIDSHIPMEN who participated in the Lebanon landing operations have won high praise. "You pulled your weight and, for good measure, went on to do much more," VAdm. Charles R. Brown, Sixth Fleet Commander, told the Midshipmen. "Well done. Good luck, God speed and hurry back with that big, broad stripe." A curious fact is that Midshipmen, under present law, are denied longevity pay credit for their Academy service, including duty at sea. Such pay credit, however, is given to a college student who happens to be a member of the Reserve or National Guard.

THERE'S BEEN NO APPARENT RUSH among Navy officers for training to fill billets aboard nuclear-powered surface ships, such as the huge carrier Enterprise and the guided missile cruiser Long Beach now under construction. The Navy, in a new message (Page 6) to all ships and stations, emphasizes that "line officers who enter this program will remain unrestricted in very sense (retain their line designator), their sea-duty promotion requirements will be safeguarded, and their command opportunity in the nuclear-ship Navy will be enhanced." It would appear that some officers have not been eager to apply for surface ship nuclear training in the fear that such specialization might handicap their careers. The Navy stresses that "opportunities for assignment to a nuclear-propelled surface ship exist today and are continually increasing."

A SERVICE SON had the opportunity this week to tell his dad where to go. 2d Lt. Charles N. Toftoy read the orders of the day at a retreat parade 28 July when Maj. Gen. H. N. Toftoy was shifted from duty as Deputy Commander of the Army Ordnance Missile Command and CG of Redstone Arsenal at Huntsville, Ala., to become CG of Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

SENIOR NAVY DOCTORS have been told by RAdm. Bartholomew W. Hogan, Surgeon General, that they should stand their fair share of watches to ease "acute and burdensome" workload carried by junior officers. "Rank and authority are necessary ingredients of sound administration," he said, "but should not be abused, else the foundation of leadership shall suffer."

THE FIRST TWO TACTICAL mobile missile test stations Convair (Pomona) Division of General Dynamics Corporation is building for the Marine Corps have left the assembly line and completed extensive road testing. The contract with the Marine Corps calls for an undisclosed number of missile checkout trucks, designed for use by units of battery size, and also for a number of missile repair vans, for units of battalion size. The battery missile test trucks are being constructed on government furnished four-wheel drive, three-quarter ton, M-37 cargo trucks. Test equipment, designed for conducting checkout of Terrier missiles under tactical conditions, and storage cabinets for tools, parts and accessories are being installed.

ONE AFTERMATH OF THE DEFENSE REORGANIZATION action that henceforth it will be more difficult for the Secretary of Defense, should he so desire, to abolish the Veterinary Corps than was possible before enactment of the legislation, one of the purposes of which was to strengthen his powers. The Veterinary Corps story is an example of how, in some respects, Congress has used the Reorganization Bill to tighten its control over the Fighting Forces.

IT WAS LEGALLY POSSIBLE before for Secretary McElroy to carry out a long talked about and much delayed order of his predecessor, Secretary Wilson, to eliminate the Veterinary Corps. When Chairman Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee objected to the Pentagon plan, Secretary McElroy quickly halted the implementation of the order.

IN THE FUTURE, should Mr. McElroy want to follow through on Mr. Wilson's scheme to unseat the Veterinary Corps, he must first advise the Armed Services Committees, which then would have 30 days of consecutive meetings of Congress to object. If one of the Committees should object and file a report, Congress then would have another 40 consecutive days to take action.

IT'S A CURIOUS FACT that action of one of the two parts of the Legislative Branch—not both—could force delay in a decision of the Executive Branch.

MARINE CORPS HEADQUARTERS, in response to inquiries, confirms the fact that Secretary of Defense McElroy's Military Assistant, Brig. Gen. Carey A. Randall, USMC, was not selected for promotion to one-star rank by a board which chose eight Leatherneck colonels for advancement (Page 6). General Randall, who has served as Executive Officer or Military Assistant to Secretaries of Defense Lovett, Wilson and McElroy, was given a "spot" promotion to brigadier general 14 March 1957. His failure of selection to permanent brigadier general means that General Randall cannot be transferred to another assignment without losing his star, unless, of course, he were to receive another "spot" promotion. He was assigned to the Pentagon in November 1950.

A SIXTEEN YEAR NAVAL MYSTERY is revived in the August issue of the official "Naval Aviation News." The story is retold of the eerie flight of the Airship L-8 which left Treasure Island, Calif., at 0600 on 16 August 1942 and landed at 1100 that day in the streets of Daly City, less than 10 miles away from the starting point. The L-8's pilots, Lt. (jg) Ernest D. Cody and Ensign Charles E. Adams, were not aboard at the landing. The airship came down unmanned. No trace of the pilots has ever been uncovered.

SERVICE PERSONNEL ARE ADVISED to make certain their records are up to date in the matter of death benefit payments. A recent Air Training Command survey discloses that persons other than next-of-kin received government insurance in more than 25% of the cases. Military men who hold government life insurance are advised to notify the VA to change designation of beneficiaries by use of VA Form 9-33.

THE AF AMMUNITION SERVICES OFFICE at the Ogden Air Materiel Area, Hill AFB, Utah, has been redesignated the Directorate of Airmunitions. Its Chief is Col. Edmund L. Miles. His office is responsible for global airmunitions activities.

ARMY DOMINATION of the U. S. Olympic Modern Pentathlon Team being challenged by the Navy. Ens. Robert L. Beck, who won varsity letters in swimming, polo and track at the University of Virginia, is competing for a spot on the four-man team now training in Texas for the World Championships at Aldershot, England, in October. The five events are swimming, running, pistol shooting, riding and fencing. His father is Cdr. O. L. Beck.

AIR FORCE MASTER SERGEANTS can have no complaints about the procedures the Air Force has employed in keeping them up-to-the-minute on plans for E-8 promotions. On 1 September, there will be 2002 advances to E-8, of which 1878 will be made by major commands and 128, out of 876 nominated, by a central selection board at USAF Headquarters. Messages have gone to the field giving the precise quotas for each AFSC.

AN EARLY PROMOTION to lieutenant general can be expected for Maj. Gen. Paul D. Adams, USA, who has been shifted from duty as CG of the Northern Area Command in Germany to head American Land Forces in Lebanon. His past assignments include duty as CofS of the Eighth Army during the fighting in Korea, Acting Army G-3 and CG of the XVIII Airborne Corps at Ft. Bragg, N. C. The fact that the Army tabbed him for the Lebanon assignment is a further indication of the high regard in which he has held. Probable reason that he wasn't made a lieutenant general earlier in his relative youth. General Adams will be 52 in October; he first was promoted to general officer rank in 1945.

Army Aviation Sets Air Crew Training

Aviation Crew Training, long in use by the Air Force, is now underway at the Maintenance and Rotary Wing Departments, Army Aviation School, Ft. Rucker, Ala.

Presently concentrating entirely on H-37 cargo helicopter crews, the crew training project is headed by Capt. Arnold R. Young. It provides joint instruction for pilots and mechanics on aircraft and maintenance, training the crews as functional groups rather than as individuals.

Lt. Col. William C. Edler, Commander of the 1st Howitzer Battalion, 7th Artillery, Ft. Riley, Kan., will become Air Officer of the 82d Airborne Division, Ft. Bragg, N. C.

Fort Lee, Va., soon will have its own airfield. Company A, 87th Engineer Battalion from Ft. Belvoir, Va., is working around the clock to finish the project by 15 October. At present, it is necessary to base Army aircraft assigned to Ft. Lee at Camp Pickett, over 40 miles away.

Knox Unit Writes Tankers Guide

A pocket-size condensation of facts a soldier needs to operate tanks in both combat and training has been published by the Military Service Publishing Company, Harrisburg, Pa.

Titled "The Tank Commander's Guide," it was written by the Army Armor Human Research Unit at Ft. Knox, Ky., after a detailed study of over 90 official reference sources and thousands of interviews with successful tank commanders.

According to the publishers, the book omits "nothing about tanks." Its cost is $2.95.

Also recently published by the Harrisburg company is a manual for "Exhibition Drills," by Capt. William M. Glasgow, Jr., described as a "how-to-do-it" manual that explains in detail the many trick drill movements used by Service drill teams. Its cost is $2.50.

DENTAL WORK CITED

For developing and perfecting a device to make dental X-rays, Col. Donald C. Hudson, USAF (DC) Chief of the Dental Research Division, School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph AFB, Tex., has received the Legion of Merit.

Maj. Gen. Otis O. Benson, Jr., Commandant, presented the decoration to Colonel Hudson, who has been with the School since 1956.

Colonel Hudson began work on the device while he was serving with the Dental Research Laboratory in the National Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C., before his present appointment.

"Having recognized the need for a simple and rapid method of detecting dental and oral abnormalities of patients in the Armed Services," said the citation accompanying the medal, Colonel Hudson conceived the idea of an X-ray instrument which would show the whole mouth on a single photographic plate, instead of taking a succession of smaller views.

The result of his experiments was "a machine which produced outstanding results, decreased manpower requirements, reduced training requirements for radiological technicians in the use of the X-ray machine, and greatly reduced exposure of patients to ionizing radiation."

Col. Raymond J. Karpen, MSC, has succeeded Lt. Col. Charles J. Gorrell, MSC, as Commander of the Medical Equipment Development Laboratory at Ft. Totten, N. Y. Colonel Karpen comes to MEDL from the Army Environmental Health Laboratory, Army Chemical Center, Edgewood Arsenal, Md., where he has been the Deputy Commander. TOUGHEN RULES FOR ARMY DRAFTEES

The 141,000 draftees who enter the Army during the current fiscal year will have to be more intelligent than their predecessors.

The President has signed legislation which permits the Army to weed-out draftees before their actual induction if their aptitude for Army jobs doesn't measure up to new, tougher standards.

At present, Army personnel are divided into four mental groups of which "group four" has the lowest mentality. The number of inductees in category four has been increasing progressively for several years and now stands at about 40%.

The Army says it is impossible to train most of the category four men to operate its complex weapons and they have to be discharged after four or five months of costly and futile training.

The new rules provide that prospective inductees who do not score at least 31 on the Armed Forces Qualification Test will have to take additional aptitude and skill tests. If they fail on two of these they will be rejected. All of those who score less than 10 on the AFQT also will be rejected.

The new law is Public Law 85-564.

U. S. Chamber Of Commerce Opposes Contract Renegotiation Act Extension

Opposition to extending the Renegotiation Act of 1951, scheduled to expire at the end of the year, was expressed in a statement by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce 29 July before the House Ways and Means Committee.

The Chamber asserted that renegotiation of defense contracts is unnecessary, a threat to the national security and an "arbitrary" process. Prevention of excessive profits, it held, can be obtained more effectively by making full use of improved procurement and repricing techniques developed since Pearl Harbor.

The Chamber, in its statement, backed the objective of the Renegotiation Act. "It is clearly in the interest of all citizens to make sure that the Government gets the goods and services it needs at minimum cost," it said.

"With the procurement process refined to the present point," the Chamber argued, "there is no need whatever for a review of earnings by an outside agency such as the Renegotiation Board. Renegotiation merely provides an additional and completely unneeded layer of Governmental supervision."

Inefficiency results when renegotiation is applied to incentive contracts, the Chamber said. The Renegotiation Board is authorized to exempt such contracts from the procedures provided in the Act, but it never has done this.

This raises for the contractor the question: "Why spend the time and effort necessary to earn incentive profits if they are to be taken away by the Renegotiation Board?"

Moreover, under the Act, the Chamber contended, "renegotiation is a judgment operation, pure and simple." Decisions are made on the basis of such factors as "risk," "contribution to the defense effort," "efficiency" and the "reasonableness" of costs and profits.

These are as difficult to evaluate as is the final question: "When are profits 'excessive'?" The answer, of course, is simply that 'excessive profits' are the profits the Board says are excessive."

The Chamber recommended procedural changes to guarantee contractors a fair hearing in cases now pending before the Board—even if Congress should let the Act expire.

CONGRESS OK's BILL FOR LONE LT.

Congress has approved and sent to the White House legislation permitting persons receiving retired pay on the emergency officers' retired list who served satisfactorily in WWII for not less than six months as a commissioned officer of one of the Armed Forces in a higher grade than that held on the emergency officers' retired list to be advanced to the higher grade and to have their pay computed on the basis of the higher grade.

The Services know of only one officer who falls in this category. He is 2d Lt. Frederick August Westphal, who served in the Army during WWI and was retired in that rank.

During WWII, he served as a commander in the Navy. The legislation permits him to be advanced to the rank of commander on the emergency officers' retired list and to receive the higher pay of that grade (an additional amount of approximately $117 per month).

The legislation also applies to "others who may be similarly situated."

Services Will Retain Legislative-Liaison Funds; Senate Group Overrides President

The President has been overruled by the Senate Appropriations Committee on a vital question involving the relations of the military departments with the Congress.

Each of the Armed Forces, for many years, has assigned officers to Capitol Hill legislative-liaison duties. These officers keep their departments informed about Congressional action on military legislation and assist the lawmakers in obtaining needed information on military matters.

President Eisenhower has charged that the legislative-liaison officers are "a principal outlet for Service rivalries," and has directed that they be consolidated into a single office under the Secretary of Defense. He has announced plans to create a new Assistant Secretary of Defense to head the office.

A number of Senators have objected to the plan. They say they like the way the present set-up works and they doubt that it can be improved by consolidation.

As a result, the Senate Appropriations Committee, in approving the military budget for the current fiscal year, has announced that it favors continuing L&L activities "in each of the Services," as well as in the office of the Secretary of Defense "as the desirable means of servicing the needs of the Congress for information and assistance on defense matters."

In order to make certain that its views prevail, the Committee has set a limitation of $100,000 on the amount of money which the Office of the Secretary of Defense can spend on legislative-liaison activities, and has given the Services the remaining L&L funds—$2,570,000.

B/G Boushey Heads AF Space Office

Appointment of Brig. Gen. Homer Astley Boushey as Director of the Advanced Technology Directorate, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Development, was announced by the Air Force, effective 29 July.

The office headed by General Boushey is a new one, created after original plans for a Directorate of Astronautics were cancelled last December. Secretary of the Air Force Douglas said at that time that the Astronautics move was premature and it was being held up until it could be coordinated with the creation by the Department of Defense of the Advanced Research Projects Agency.

General Boushey, who enrolled as a Flying Cadet in June, 1932, became the first Commander of a jet organization in 1943 when the 412th Fighter Group was set up on a confidential basis at Muroc, Calif. Four years later he led the first over-water flight of jet fighter aircraft, a squadron of P-80's, from the Philippines to Okinawa. He became Deputy Director of Research and Development, Headquarters, USAF, Washington, D. C., in July, 1957.

School Bill Stirs Conflict On Sending Military Families To Overseas Areas

A House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee has sent Pentagon officials scurrying to their desks to dig up voluminous sets of statistics on Armed Forces Dependents Schools overseas.

The officials and many other experienced observers had expected the hearings on improved teaching conditions in the overseas schools to proceed quickly and smoothly.

This view was particularly prevalent since the Senate hearings, just two weeks before, had consumed a total of only 25 minutes. The bill was favorably reported to the Senate 29 July.

However, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Personnel and Reserve Charles C. Finucane no sooner finished reading his prepared statement to the House Subcommittee 30 July when Subcommittee Chairman Rep. Lindley Beckworth (D-Tex.) launched a bombardment of questions.

Representative Beckworth wanted to receive a complete breakdown on teachers in the overseas schools by age groups, marital status, nationality, state of residence, academic qualifications and length of service in the overseas school system.

Most of these statistics are available only in the overseas commands.

A smaller salvo was unexpectedly received from Rep. H. R. Gross (R-Ia.), who questioned the wisdom of having military dependents in overseas areas in the first place.

"In my opinion," Congressman Gross said, "we ought to get them back here, ought not to have sent them in the first place, and ought to be getting them back now."

Opposition to this view was expressed by Rep. Vincent J. Dellay (D-N. J.), who stressed that military families should be kept together as much as possible.

The hearings did elicit strong convictions from subcommittee members that as long as the school teachers were needed they should be given good working conditions and be well paid.

Passage of the overseas school bill this session of Congress, which is scheduled to end in mid-August, will hinge upon speedy action by the House Post Office and Civil Service committee.

If the committee can report the bill speedily, it could be enacted by the House before Congress adjourns. It is now awaiting final action by the Senate.

AFB Named In Honor Of Gen. Vandenberg

Cooke AFB will be rededicated Vandenberg AFB 4 October in honor of the late General Hoyt S. Vandenberg who was

Air Force Chief of Staff at the time of his retirement in June, 1953.

The California base originally was named for Philip St. George Cooke, a noted soldier, Indian explorer and author. Built in 1942, the Base first served as an Army Armored Division training post.

It was deactivated by the Army in 1953 and remained inactive until January, 1957, when the Air Force took it over as a missile crew training site.

General Vandenberg, who spent more than 30 years in military service, died 2 April 1954.

Gen. Schriever Receives DSM For Missile Work

General Thomas D. White, Chief of Staff last week presented the Distinguished Service Medal to Maj. Gen. Bernard A. Schriever, Deputy Commander for Ballistic Missiles, ARDC. The citation follows:

"Major General Bernard A. Schriever distinguished himself by exceptionally meritorious service to the Government in a position of great responsibility as the Commander of the Air Force Ballistic Missile Division of the Air Research and Development Command from 1 July 1954 to 18 December 1957. During this period General Schriever has been outstandingly successful in directing the development of intercontinental and intermediate range ballistic missiles for the USAF. Under his leadership the national military academic and industrial resources have been combined into a singularly responsive and productive development team. The contribution of this effort and the recent successful firing of the ATLAS missile is a tribute to his enthusiasm, determination and unswerving dedication to the cause of national airpower. By his exceptional achievements General Schriever has reflected greatest credit to himself and the U. S. Air Force."

Capt. Reedy Reports As USS Lexington CO

Capt. James R. Reedy, USN, formally relieved Capt. B. L. Bailey, USN, as Commanding Officer of the USS Lexington (CVA-16) on 23 July. The change of command ceremony took place on the parade ground adjacent to the berth in Pearl Harbor where the attack carrier lay a few days prior to departing for operations at sea.

Captain Reedy initially joined the Lexington on her deployment from San Diego, flying aboard at the controls of a Douglas A3D Skywarrior, the Navy's latest jet attack bomber.

CAPITOL INJUNCTIONS

In its formal report on the Pentagon Reorganization Plan, the Senate Armed Services Committee made these special points:

POWER OF ASST. SECDEF'S.

"Much of the controversy over the language 'separately administered' or 'separately organized' and whether the direction, authority and control of the Secretary of Defense over the military departments must be exercised through the Service Secretaries is based in large part on the activities of the Assistant Secretaries of Defense. Since the Service Secretaries are being retained, to avoid the administrative disruption that would result if a Secretary of a Department were not informed of orders from the Secretary of Defense to subordinate elements of a military department, the bill provides that except as otherwise provided by law an Assistant Secretary of Defense has authority to issue orders to a military department only if the Secretary of Defense has delegated him the authority to issue such orders, and if such orders are issued through the Secretary of the military department or a person designated by him to receive the orders."

ROLE OF MILITARY DEPARTMENTS

"The military departments still would furnish the forces that would make up unified commands and the military departments would control operations in other than unified and specified commands. The bill uses the word 'combatant' to modify the unified or specified commands authorized to be established. This usage is intended to prevent the training, logistical, and administrative functions of the military services from being organized into unified commands."

ENLARGED JOINT STAFF

"The Committee considers that the additional officers to be assigned to the Joint Staff should be reassigned from existing duties and that enlargement of the Joint Staff should not increase the officer requirements of the Services."

"Tried To Get In Cavalry," says JCS Chairman At General Wyman Ceremony

General Nathan F. Twining, USAF, Chairman of the JCS, led a company strength group of military officers who joined Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker in ceremonies 28 July at which General Willard G. Wyman, retiring Commander of the Continental Army Command was awarded a second Oak Leaf Cluster to the Distinguished Service Medal.

General Wyman was succeeded 1 August at Ft. Monroe, Va., by General Bruce C. Clarke, who had been Commanding General of the Seventh Army in Germany.

Hailing the brilliant service of his 1 November 1918 USMA classmate, General Twining confided that like General Wyman, who succeeded, "I tried to get in the cavalry, but I didn't quite make it scholastically."

General Twining was commissioned originally in the infantry.

Secretary Brucker saluted the contributions made by General Twining to national defense in important assignments throughout the world.

Here is the text of the citation:

"General Wyman distinguished himself by exceptionally meritorious service in successive positions of national significance from September 1952 to January 1954 as Commanding General, Allied Land Forces Southeastern Europe; from February 1954 to June 1955 as Commanding General, Sixth United States Army; and from July 1955 to 31 July 1958 as Deputy Commanding General and Commanding General, United States Continental Army Command.

"General Wyman performed the complex duties of those offices involving highly important political, security, and operational and training matters in an exceptional manner. He displayed brilliant leadership and endless enthusiasm in establishing Allied Land Forces Southeastern Europe. By his decisive purposefulness and tireless effort, he created an integrated international staff and overcame the intricate problems of establishing a new headquarters. Charged with development of land forces plans and policies at the highest level, General Wyman secured and maintained to an eminent degree the credence, admiration, and esteem of the military and governmental officials of Greece and Turkey.

"Exhibiting superb leadership and keen judgment during his service as Commanding General, Sixth United States Army, General Wyman strengthened the operational effectiveness of the entire command through his far-sighted planning, and constant attention to and personal interest in the well-being and training of his troops. Serving as Deputy Commanding General and Commanding General, United States Continental Army Command, General Wyman demonstrated outstanding abilities, professional knowledge, discerning judgment, and inspired leadership in his many responsibilities of national significance.

"This momentous task included organization and training of the Army in the field; reorganization and expansion of the Combat Development Program; reorganization of the Reserve structure to include the organization of 14 Reserve Corps to replace the 49 military districts; the mobile forces concept; development of the Pentana concept; reorganization of the combat divisions under ROCAD, ROCID, and ROTAD TOE's; and the expansion of Headquarters, United States Continental Army Command, which resulted in tremendous additional responsibilities to that headquarters. General Wyman continually demonstrated the highest order of leadership, professional competence, and wisdom in the development, training, and field testing of an experimental field-type Army. His foresight, vast military experience, and perspicacity brought forth newly adopted concepts for modern warfare.

"Under his brilliant direction, the Combat Developments Experimentation Center was established to experiment with combat techniques developed but heretofore untested except in maneuvers. The results of General Wyman's actions are felt wherever United States Army troops are stationed, and his significant contributions to the global missions of the United States Army reflect the greatest credit upon himself and the military service."

GOLD KEY TO AFA

A gold master key to the new U. S. Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs for Col. Albert E. Stoltz, Director of the Air Force Academy Construction Agency, was formally presented on 1 August. The key was accepted by Maj. Gen. James E. Briggs, Academy Superintendent.

M/G Toftoy Wins DSM; To Command Aberdeen

Maj. Gen. Holger N. Toftoy, Commanding General of Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Ala., since 1954, has been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

General Toftoy becomes Commanding General, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., 5 August.

The General played a large part in getting the United States off to an early start in the missile and rocket field. Immediately after WWII, while serving as a colonel in Army Ordnance Technical Intelligence, he conceived and implemented "Operation Paperclip." Under this code name, Dr. Wernher von Braun and about 130 other German scientists were brought to the United States. The majority are now at Redstone, and as United States citizens, are engaged in the missile and space programs.

Most of the Army's guided missiles and large rockets were developed under General Toftoy's direction, including Redstone, a modified version of which has launched Explorers I, II, and IV.

NABTC Evaluates Tempco Trainer

The first six TT-1 Pinto jet trainers have been delivered to NAAS Saufley Field, Fla.

Built by the Tempco Aircraft Corp., Dallas, the trim planes will be used in evaluating an all-jet basic training syllabus. Selection of the TT-1 by the Navy as a basic training plane was made after exhaustive evaluation against other craft designed to meet similar specifications.

The evaluation tests were conducted at the Naval Air Test Center, Patuxent River, Md.

Pinto is powered by a J-69-T-9 Continental turbo-jet engine which has a rated thrust of 920 pounds at sea level.

The flight of new TT-1's from the Dallas plant was led by Cdr. M. C. Friedman, Group Commander, Basic Training Group One.

A squadron, made up of ten instructors and led by Maj. W. R. Lucas, USMC, has been formed at the field. Other Squadron members are: Lieutenants F. J. Moran, W. W. Parks, S. P. Gallup, H. O. Wetmore, B. R. Miller, J. E. Wasson, R. S. Olson, and Capt. D. E. Schneider.

The new plane has a cruising speed of 235 knots, a service ceiling of 30,000 feet, a diving speed of 450 knots, and a maximum range of 240 nautical miles. The Pinto stands 10 feet high, is 30.1 feet long, has a 29-foot wing span, and weighs 3,139 pounds.

General Lemnitzer To London

General L. L. Lemnitzer, Vice Chief of Staff of the Army, left Washington, D. C., 28 July by MATS aircraft for London where he will serve as U. S. Representative to the Military Committee of the Baghdad Pact.

Kincheloe's death, stated "His courageous leadership both in combat and test flying exemplified the aggressive spirit which has made our country strong and kept the nation free."

Captain Kincheloe, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Iven C. Kincheloe, sr., of Cassopolis, Mich., is survived by his wife, the former Miss Dorothy Heinig, and his son, Robert Earl Kincheloe.

Sgt. Edward E. Swartwood, USA, Ret.

Sgt. Edward E. Swartwood, USA, Ret., died on 22 July at the U. S. Soldiers' Home, Washington, D. C.

Sergeant Swartwood was well known to graduates of the U. S. Military Academy. For many years he was head policeman at the Academy. When he retired, Company A of the U. S. Corps of Cadets was unofficially known to the Cadets, if not to the Tactical Department, as "Pop Swartwood's Rifles."

Sergeant Swartwood served in the Army from 22 June 1891 to 21 July 1919. His war service included the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection and World War I. Burial was in the Soldiers' Home National Cemetery on 25 July.

Lt. Gen. Claire Chennault, USAF-Ret.

Lt. Gen. Claire Chennault, USAF-Ret., leader of the "Flying Tigers" and 14th Air Force during WW II, was buried in Arlington National Cemetery 30 July after funeral services at the Ft. Myer, Va., chapel.

Previous services had been held in New Orleans, where he died at the Ochsner Foundation Hospital 27 July.

General Chennault, recently elevated to three-star rank by special act of Congress, was born in Waterproof, La., and entered the Army as an infantry lieutenant during WW I. He later transferred to the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps, serving in that branch until his retirement in 1937 at the age of 46.

Within a few months of his retirement he was asked to train a Chinese air force to meet the anticipated Japanese invasion.

Recruiting Army and Navy pilots, he formed the volunteer "Flying Tiger" group, which first saw action against the Japanese 10 days after Pearl Harbor. In July 1942 his group was absorbed by the U. S. 14th Air Force in China under General Chennault's command.

After WW II, General Chennault made his home on Formosa where he operated an airline and maintained his close friendship with Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai-shek.

He is survived by his wife, the former Anna Chan, six sons and four daughters.

Dr. Hunsaker Receives Navy's Service Award

The Distinguished Public Service Award, highest honor conferred on civilians by the Department of the Navy, was presented 28 July in Washington, D. C., to Dr. Jerome C. Hunsaker, USNA '08, Professor Emeritus at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and former Coordinator of Naval Research and Development and scientific advisor to the top civilian and military heads of the Navy.

The presentation was made by Secretary of the Navy Thomas S. Gates, jr. The citation recognizes Dr. Hunsaker's services over a half century as "a creative pioneer in every scientific and technological phase in Naval Aviation since its inception" and his contributions "to the effectiveness and prestige of the Navy and strength of the nation."

Navy Assigns Polaris Subs; Builds 2 DE's

Secretary of the Navy Thomas S. Gates, jr., has assigned construction of the fourth and fifth atomic-powered Polaris submarines to the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, N. H., and the Newport News, Va., Shipbuilding and Drydock Company.

At the same time, the Secretary said that building of two destroyer escorts, previously scratched from the fiscal year 1957 shipbuilding program, will be resumed by the Avondale Marine Ways, Inc., La. The work was halted after the ships were about 20 per cent completed.

Authority for construction of the two new SSBN's is contained in the FY '59 shipbuilding program.

HOUSE CUTS CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

The House has approved and sent to the Senate a sharply-reduced fiscal '59 military construction program.

Funds cut from the Air Force program total $300 million, from the Army, $126.3 million and from the Navy and Marine Corps, $85.5 million.

Numerous barracks, bachelor officers quarters, family housing units, support facilities and medical and dental facilities were dropped from the program because the House Appropriations Committee decided there was not "ample justification" for their construction.

The approved funds total $214.5 million for the Army, $274.7 million for the Navy and Marine Corps, $8 million for Naval Reserve Forces, $687.3 million for the Air Force, $14.1 million for Air Force Reserve components, $20 million for interservice activities and $50 million to be derived from transfer for the Advanced Research Projects Agency, for a total of $1.2 billion as opposed to $1.7 billion requested by the Administration.

Army Medical Service Will Issue Formulary

The Army Medical Service Formulary—the first publication of its kind in the history of military medicine—will be released in late August 1958 for world-wide distribution throughout the U. S. Army Medical Service.

Compiled by Lt. Col. William L. Austin, Chief Pharmacy Consultant to the Army Surgeon General, the Formulary will provide a convenient reference source of essential data on the Army's current therapeutic armamentarium and will insure uniformity in military medical therapeutics.

The new Formulary, published as Technical Manual 8-245, will be available on request through regular Adjutant General channels. It will serve as the basic source of reference for definitive information concerning drugs, both standard and nonstandard, available to military physicians for use in the treatment of disease.

Navy Steps-Up Surface A-Ship Training Plan

The Navy is seeking officer applications for training leading to assignment aboard nuclear-powered surface ships.

In an all-ships-and stations instruction, Chief of Naval Personnel VAdm. P. Smith points out that "opportunities for assignment to a nuclear propelled surface ship exist today and are continually increasing."

Two atomic-powered ships, USS Enterprise (CVAN-65) and USS Long Beach (CGN-9) are under construction. A third atomic surface ship, the large frigate-type destroyer (DLGN) is expected to be authorized in the 1959 shipbuilding program.

The land prototype engineering plant for the carrier and cruiser will be operational this Summer at AEC's National Reactor Test Station, near Idaho Falls, Idaho.

The land prototype reactor for the destroyer soon will enter the construction phase at AEC's West Milton site, near Schenectady, N. Y.

Officers picked for the program will be assigned to a six-month academic course in basic reactor theory and technology, mathematics, physics, and specific components and systems of a nuclear plant.

Following this course, the selectees will be sent to either Idaho Falls or Schenectady for six months of operational on-the-job training.

All Regular and active duty Reserve lieutenants (jg) and ensigns are eligible to apply. However, Reserve officers and Regular officers who came into the Navy through the ROTC program will be required to execute agreements to remain on active duty for the duration of the course and to serve at least two years after completing training.

Complete details are contained in Bu Pers Instruction 1520.68.

SIXTH FLEET ACTION—Just before the Sixth Fleet went into action in the Middle East, scores of wives and children of officers and sailors were taken aboard the cruiser Des Moines for a day at sea. The object was to acquaint the families with the duties performed by the husbands and fathers at sea. One highlight was the highline ride in a boatswain's chair taken by Mrs. Charles R. Brown, wife of Vice Admiral Brown, Sixth Fleet Commander.

Gun Factory Quarters Being Refurbished

Extensive renovations are under way and more are reportedly to come on houses at the Naval Gun Factory at Washington, D. C., where quarters are being assigned to admirals stationed in the area.

Three admirals already have taken over living accommodations at the partially idle facility and present plans call for an additional seven to move in by 1960. The transition is taking place as the officers stationed at the Gun Factory are moved or leave for normal reassignments.

Currently being renovated for the use of Vice Adm. Robert E. Pierie, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air, is a three-story, four-bedroom attached dwelling. Cost of the project was originally estimated at $18,000, but this figure may be topped with the addition of several extra items.

Behind the changeover is an order from Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, Chief of Naval Operations, directing that "appropriate" living quarters be provided the admirals for whom accommodations at the facility are designated. They will include, eventually, six deputy chiefs, seven bureau chiefs, the Director of Naval Intelligence, Chief of Naval Material and the Commander of the Military Sea Transportation Service.

Sec. Def. Asks Governors To Designate 15-23 Sept. "Armed Forces Voters' Week"

Secretary of Defense McElroy has suggested designation of the period 15-22 September as "Armed Forces Voters' Week" to the Governors of each of the States and Territories, as a means of encouraging members of the Armed Forces to exercise their voting rights.

Tell Of Local Issues

Describing the purpose of the absentee voting program—to promote greater participation in free government on local, State and National levels—Secretary McElroy said: "We need assistance in reminding parents and wives to write to their sons and husbands overseas, telling them of local issues and candidates, and urging them to take part according to their political convictions, in the coming elections.

The Secretary added: "We also need much attention directed to the Service families in this country, who are away from their home States." "We believe," he continued, "that through uniformity of effort and through the support and cooperation of patriotic citizens in every State, we can promote greater participation in the coming elections."

In a memorandum to the Secretaries of the Army, Navy, and Air Force, Secretary McElroy last month requested that all military commands "seek to develop and sustain a positive degree of interest in this year's servicemen's voting program, giving proper emphasis on all levels to counselling of personnel and providing adequate information pertaining to the voting laws of each State."

2 1/2 Million Voters

It is estimated that the Federal Voting Assistance Program covers approximately 2,600,000 persons, of whom nearly 2,500,000 are Servicemen of voting age, wives of Servicemen overseas, wives of Servicemen outside of the States where they vote, and dependents of Servicemen overseas and outside of the States where they vote.

Sen. Symington Urges Congress To Give Army Chance To Win Against Great Odds

that chance. Our Army is still using much equipment of the World War II type, which has long since ceased to be modern enough to compete against equipment placed in view by the Communists in Moscow last November.

"As example," Senator Symington said, "enraptured with missiles, especially after Sputnik, we have now appropriated money for various Army missiles, the Redstone, the Sergeant, the Lacrosse, the Honest John.

"But we have consistently refused to give more than token equipment required to locate targets for those missiles; and it is hard to see what use they are without equipment to that end," he said.

Senator Symington noted that "the Army's requirement for new flame-throwers has been overlooked—self-propelled mortars, and for many other short-range combat weapons, requirements that have been repeatedly requested."

The Senator stressed that "no Army is in proper shape without eyes furnished by modern cavalry.

"Nevertheless," he said, "one still finds the American Army with light liaison type airplanes that have but marginal improvements over those used in World War II.

"In order to correct the situation," he said, "the Army has asked repeatedly, but amount needed to meet military operational requirements only."

The committee made the recommendations in its report on the authorization bill for the annual multi-million dollar military construction program. It approved the program after chopping away more than $560 million of the requested authority. The Senate passed the bill 30 July.

The committee report also delved into major defense policy areas with which, the committee said, the big military construction program has not been properly coordinated.

Discussing each of these areas in detail, the committee concluded:

- We must place greater emphasis on our striking power and "limited war" capabilities.

- We must make decisions to eliminate duplication in defensive weapons systems. Such weapons systems which are retained "should not be designed in a futile attempt to obtain 100 per cent defense but rather to insure the security of our striking capability."

The committee also:

- Combined construction authorization for the Army's NIKE-Hercules, Hawk and Missile Master and the Air Force Bomarc program and gave the Secretary of Defense the combined authorization to construct for either the Army or the Air Force "such missile sites as he deems essential for the proper security of the nation."

- Hinted that the Defense Department is planning a substantial manpower reduction "in the near future." According to rumor, the committee said, "the possible future reductions are substantially greater than that experienced during the last two years."

- Told the Army "to take stock of itself and redirect its efforts toward providing the United States with the finest force in the world capable of victorious sustained ground combat."

- Questioned why some of the money the Army has spent on fixed defenses has not been utilized to buy needed C-133 type turboprop transports for airlift.

Brig. Gen. Thomas W. Mattingly, Chief of the Department of Medicine at Walter Reed Army Hospital and President Eisenhower's cardiologist, will retire 31 August after more than 24 years' service to become Director of Education at the new Washington, D. C., Medical Center.

Capt. Robert M. White, USAF, who had been the "backup pilot" for the Air Force's participation in the forthcoming North American X-15 program, has moved to the top spot following the death of his friend, Capt. Iven Kincheloe, USAF, in an F-104 accident 26 July at Edwards AFB, Calif. Capt. Charles Bock, USAF, will pilot the B-52 that will carry the X-15 rocket plane aloft.

Captain White has been assigned to the Flight Test Center at Edwards for the past four years. He has 4200 hours as a pilot.

Maj. Gen. Holger N. Toftoy, USA, who moves from duty as Commanding General of Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Ala., to command Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., received the Distinguished Service Medal from Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker in a Pentagon ceremony 30 July. As Chief of Technical Intelligence for Army Ordnance in Europe during the closing phases of WWII, he "recognized the wealth of German scientific and engineering knowledge that had developed the V-2 rocket at Peenemuende and foresaw it as a foundation for the envisioned Guided Missile Program within the United States Army," the citation declares.

In June 1945, General Toftoy was assigned to Washington direct rocket and guided missile research and development. "Atomic fire support by mobile rockets such as Honest John."

RAdm. Harry E. Sears, USN, retired 31 July after more than 34 years' service to become the first full-time Executive Director of the Armed Forces Management Association. He holds the rank of vice admiral on the retired list.

Admiral Sears will establish his offices at the Pentagon on 15 August until permanent offices are developed in downtown Washington.

Sen. Martin Cites Journal Articles

Senator Edward Martin (R-Pa.) has inserted in the Congressional Record articles from THE JOURNAL (12 July) on the 183d birthday of the Army Chaplaincy and the Army's revised Guard Reserve plan.

In connection with the "very interesting story" on the Chaplaincy, he noted that "from the earliest colonial days dedicated men of God have served the spiritual needs of our military forces." And, he said, from his own experiences as a soldier, he knows "that chaplains have meant more to the American Army than to any other army of the world."

THE JOURNAL article concerning the Army's revised plans for the National Guard and Army Reserve was included as a part of General Martin's remarks on the same subject on the Senate floor.

He said, "Many of us have felt that the proposal to reorganize the National Guard and the Reserve into pentomic divisions should be weighed with extreme care, in the event of brush wars, in which we are likely to be engaged, manpower will be of great importance. We will need manpower also in case of civilian emergencies such as floods, fires, and other catastrophes."

Air Force Cols. Move

Col. Edward P. Wynne, Deputy Director of Air Weapons Development in the ARDC Directorate of Air Weapons, Andrews AFB, Md., has been named Director of Range Development for the Air Force Missile Test Center, Patrick AFB, Fla.

Col. Hugh H. Moreland, Second Air Force Chief of Communications and Electronics, Directorate of Operations, Barksdale AFB, La., will attend the Armed Forces Industrial College, Washington, D. C. He will be succeeded by Col. Albert J. Lacy, arriving from Germany.

Vehicle Maintenance Will Be Revised; Quarterly Inspections Will Be Feature

A reduced inspection load and standardized practices for automotive maintenance are the main features of a new Army maintenance program to begin field tests at Ft. Hood, Tex., 1 August.

Detailed in Army Technical Manual 9-2810 to be issued in September, the new program has undergone preliminary tests at Ft. Knox, Ky., Ft. Riley, Kans., and Camp Irwin, Calif.

Under the new programs the only regular inspections will be quarterly ones, replacing weekly, bi-weekly, monthly and semi-annual inspections previously required. Non-scheduled inspections will continue on the basis of need.

The new training manual has been described as a complete guide for motor personnel, including information on training, inspections supply and preventive maintenance. Standardization of practice, Army officials said, will eliminate the need for local rules and interpretations.

The program is being ushered in under the guidance of Col. Richard H. Peters, Post Ordnance Officer, and Lt. Col. W. P. Cassidy, representing the Army Maintenance Board, Ft. Knox.

Basic idea of the program is to provide more time for maintenance and repair by reducing the number of scheduled inspections.

Tilt-Wing Aircraft Hurdles First Test

Completion of the first transition flight of a tilt-wing VTOL (vertical take-off and landing) research aircraft, Model 76, developed for the Army, has been successfully accomplished.

Developed by Vertol Aircraft Corporation of Morton, Pa., under contract with the Office of Naval Research, the Vertol model is the first tilt-wing aircraft to complete successfully the full transition cycle in free flight.

The Model 76 is part of the VTO research program to develop a flying machine combining the high speed forward flight of the airplane with the vertical flight capabilities of the helicopter. The wing and rotor-propellers are tilted vertically to take off and horizontally for flight like a conventional aircraft.

Initial flight of the aircraft took place recently at Vertol's test facilities in Philadelphia, when it took off in a hover and flew through transition to forward flight for the full length of the 7,500 foot runway before returning to hover for landing.

The flight was reported officially 22 July.

The flight was preceded by extensive model tests by the laboratories of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics and the Forrestal Research Center, Princeton University, which has co-operated with the Department of Defense in the development of the Vertol model and other VTOL research aircraft.

For the past several years the Office of Naval Research has conducted studies of the feasibility of vertical take-off and landing aircraft. The successful flight of the VTOL Model 76 research aircraft is a result of these studies.

The Army's VTOL research program is part of this overall research effort to develop new and advanced types of aircraft capable of operating from extremely short landing fields or cleared small open spaces.

Better Barrier Built To Halt Fast Jets

An improved emergency runway barrier system for stopping jet aircraft after a landing has been developed for the Air Research and Development Command.

The barrier can safely halt a fighter without braking power traveling at nearly 200 m.p.h., a medium jet bomber at 170 miles an hour, and heavier bombers at lower speeds.

Under contract to ARDC's Wright Air Development Center (WADC), the barrier was developed by the All-American Engineering Company, Wilmington, Del.

Carriage-like friction brakes operating along 200-foot tracks flanking the runway connect a steel cable and a nylon net stretched across the runway. As the aircraft rolls into the webbing, its nose wheel is dragged along, pulling the cable up to catch the main gear.

The cable then pulls the carriages along the track as the braking action occurs. Through use of pulleys, the cable is arranged to move 1,000 feet while the braking carriages move 200 feet.

As the carriages move along the tracks, energy is dissipated by brake shoes riding between 14 stainless steel ribbons on each track. Each ribbon runs the length of the track and measures 10 inches wide.

In WWII he served as special assistant to the Undersecretary of War for Production. He has been a director of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers, and is past president of the San Francisco Post, American Ordnance Association.

$35 Million Missile R&D Set By Republic

Republic Aviation Corporation, Farmingdale, L. I., is embarking on a $35 million research and development program on advanced aircraft, missiles and spacecraft, including missile systems capable of destroying a satellite or orbiting weapon.

A four year program will include a new $14 million engineering research and development center to house laboratories for space environmental development, re-entry research, materials development, electronics, guidance and control systems development, and the development of advanced fluid systems.

"Although the company this year is completing a $12 million expansion of research and development facilities, Republic President Mundy I. Peale said, the scope and dimension of the new project 'dwarfs this and any previous year's capital expenditures by the company.'

F. A. Kalinski, USMA '43, Named Vertol Director

He holds Masters' Degrees in aeronautical engineering from the California Institute of Technology and in International Relations from Georgetown University. He also earned the degree of Doctor of Philosophy with highest honors from the University of Madrid in 1954.

Charles Theodore has been elected Vice-President in charge of sales for Ling Electronics, Inc., according to an announcement by President Cameron G. Pierce, at Culver City, Calif. Prior to joining AMF, he was Washington Representative for Northrop Aircraft, Inc. and from 1939 to 1949 was with Lockheed Aircraft Company as Sales Representative.

General Twining On Airlift: He Says No Service Would Seek More Transports With Extra $2.5 Billion

THE Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff has reaffirmed his conviction that the Armed Forces have "sufficient airlift to meet our real needs."

General Nathan F. Twining told the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee that in considering during March what they would like to buy if given $1.5 or $2.5 billions additional, "troop carrier aircraft were not on any (his emphasis) list."

The Army during recent months has indicated that the major shortcoming confronting its STRAC forces is the lack of adequate immediately available aircraft.

Herewith is the text of General Twining's prepared statement on airlift for the ground forces, as presented 24 July to the Senate group:

"One of the 17 Recommendations of this Subcommittee was that there should be provided for the Armed Forces of the United States 'an adequate airlift for ground troops.' In my first report to the Committee on this Recommendation on February 26th, 1958, I stated that, as of that date, the Joint Chiefs of Staff were on record that our airlift capabilities were, in general, adequate. I further stated that the Joint Chiefs of Staff had directed that another study be made of the whole airlift problem in the light of the world situation as it exists today. On April 3d, I reported that the Joint Chiefs of Staff study on airlift was still in progress and would not be completed for sometime.

Complex Study

"Any study of strategic airlift is bound to be complex, studded as it must be with assumptions that may or may not be valid in actual emergency situations. Such factors as I discussed in my testimony of April 3d as—bases; servicing facilities; stocks of gasoline and spare parts; communications; air terminals capable of receiving, unloading, and servicing the aircraft expeditiously—must be taken into account. Furthermore, these factors must be taken into account for each movement contemplated. All of the factors I enumerated vary for movements from and to different points. A very good discussion of the general factors involved in strategic airlift was given by my predecessor as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to the Mahon Subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations. A sanitized version of this presentation appears at pages 2049 through 2097 of that Subcommittee's hearing on the Department of Defense Appropriations for 1958.

"With the above as a background, let me give you a progress report on what the Joint Chiefs of Staff organization has accomplished since I last testified on this subject 2½ months ago. The Joint Staff has, all during this period, been engaged in an extensive and comprehensive study of strategic airlift under mobilization and wartime conditions. This study covers a four-year time period, 1958 through 1962—and constitutes an over-all evaluation of airlift capability vs. airlift requirements, for the first two months of a general war.

"The evaluation is made under two major conditions: First, when D-day follows a mobilization day of six months; and second, when D-day and M-day coincide.

"This study has been completed and coordinated throughout the Joint Staff and is currently being commented upon and cleared by the Services. It should be ready for formal presentation to the Joint Chiefs within the next two weeks. Should the Committee desire, the conclusions and recommendations of this study could be discussed in a later executive session, subsequent to consideration of the paper by the Chiefs.

"Pacific Wargaming"

"In addition to the study I have outlined above, the Joint Chiefs of Staff have noted and approved a report of the Joint Advanced Study Group on U.S. airlift capability in a specific emergency situation in the Pacific. This Group took a typical limited war situation as set forth in an existing CINCPAC operation plan calling for U.S. military participation in the defense of a Far Eastern country. The Group did what we in the Military call 'wargaming' of this particular operation plan. In developing that portion of the study concerned with U.S. airlift capability to support troop deployments to the emergency area in accordance with plans, a problem allocation of airlift consistent with U. S. airlift capabilities in the Pacific area was utilized. The Study Group concluded that, with the airlift allocated, the planned deployment of forces and material to implement the operation plan was feasible from the airlift point of view. That is to say—they concluded we had sufficient airlift to do the job required. I wish to emphasize that this is but one limited war situation out of many possibilities. It was studied and wargamed, however, with the maximum amount of realism which can be put into such a problem. Because this is an actual, not a theoretical, war plan, the solution is very highly classified and further details cannot be given in open session.

Chairman's Mind Unchanged

"I would like to conclude by stating that nothing which has been developed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff organization thus far has changed my opinion that we have in being and programmed sufficient airlift to meet our real needs. I want the Committee to know, however, that I and the Joint Chiefs of Staff as a corporate body have an open mind on this subject and our study of it is deep, thorough, and continuous.

"The balancing of priorities in what we must buy to best defend the United States is one of the most difficult problems which face the Chiefs as a corporate body. If the individual Services could have everything they wanted, I'm sure the Air Force would like to have more troop carrier aircraft—so would I. But, as I pointed out to this Committee on February 26th of this year: 'Somewhere the Joint Chiefs as a corporate body has to make up its mind what you are going to buy.'

"The fact of the matter is—when the Joint Chiefs were considering in March of this year a priority list of what they would like most to buy if they were given 1.5 billion dollars additional funds and what they would like most to buy if they were given 2.5 billion dollars additional—troop carrier aircraft were not on any Service list."

Rocketdyne To Build Giant Missile Engine

An Air Force contract to begin development of major components for a rocket engine in the one million pounds thrust class has been awarded to Rocketdyne, division of North American Aviation, Inc.

Awarded by Wright Air Development Center after design competition among the nation's rocket firms, the contract began work toward the giant thrusts acknowledged to be essential first steps in manned interplanetary exploration.

Simultaneously, the Air Force under separate contract extended Rocketdyne development of a previously undisclosed engine to provide thrust in the intermediate range between current propulsion systems and the huge million-pound engine.

The two contracts were announced by K. Hoffman, a vice-president of North American Aviation, Inc., and general manager of Rocketdyne.

Electronic Communications Inc., St. Petersburg, Fla., reports that June orders reached a record total of $3,500,000, a major part of the total for military electronic equipment. Formerly known as Ray Associates Inc., the firm moved its headquarters last year from Teterboro, N. J.

Tale & Towne Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia, $819,000 for 300 aero bomb trucks for the Navy.

Plalkins Inc., New York, $600,000 for navy life raft survival kits.

Chrysler Corporation's Airtemp Division at Dayton, will manufacture additional fire control equipment for Army tanks in the amount of nearly $5,300,000. New contracts call for the manufacture of range-finders, telescopes, ballistic computers, and shock mounts for the latest medium tank—the M48-A2.

Federal Electric Corp., Paramus, N. J., has been given $1 million for repair and reinstallation at Distant Early Warning (DEW) line sites.

Hughes Aircraft Co., Fullerton, Calif., reports $5.2 million for work on Army air defense systems.

Philco Corp., Philadelphia, has been awarded $1 million for inter-battery microwave communication systems between Nike missile sites and anti-aircraft operation centers in Alaska.

Vitro Corp. of America, New York, will provide the systems engineering required to arm three heavy cruisers, the Albany, the Chicago, and the Fall River, with Talos and Tartar missiles.

ARPA Creates Unit For Missile Defense

Director Roy W. Johnson of the Advanced Research Projects Agency, has announced the formation of the Ballistic Missile Defense Group under the coordination of Mr. William Hutchins.

Mr. Johnson stated that ARPA's responsibility for ballistic missile defense is of an advanced research nature and is concerned with research and development of systems "beyond the present state of the art."

This research is designed to provide a defensive capability against predictable but still future threats.

Mr. Johnson noted that "if the United States is to control access by enemy forces to vital U. S. targets, our ready and effective active defense system must continually improve. Passive means of defense—such as dispersal and mobility—will contribute to the national safety but are inherently inadequate substitutes for effective active defense measures.

The several panels established within BMD are organized as follows:

Dr. Wade Blocker—Kill Mechanisms
Mr. Clifford Cummings—Interception
Mr. Stuart Hight—Data Processing for Decisions

Dr. Richard Holbrook—Active Defense
Mr. Harry Iddings—Radar
Dr. Ward Low—Upper Atmosphere Physics

Dr. David Luck—Very Early Warning
Dr. Glenn Pippert—Range Instrumentation and Special Ranges
Dr. Leroy Tillotson—Anti-satellite

Cut In Funds Perils Medicare Program; DoD Study Report Due Next Week

Thousands of Service wives and children could be denied free medical attention under a cut-back which is shaping up for the Armed Forces Dependent Medical Care program.

This is the effect forecast by sources who helped to hammer out the Medicare Act which Congress approved less than two years ago.

Here is a chronology of events which show how the program was developed and how the Congress is now preparing to sound its death knell:

- On 1 April 1953, President Eisenhower established a Citizens Advisory Commission on Medical Care of Dependents of Military Personnel. The top-level study group was headed by Dr. Harold G. Moulton, economist and President Emeritus of the Brookings Institution. Other members were Dr. George W. Bachman, Mrs. Eugene Meyer and Thomas I. Parkinson.

- Following an intensive three-months study of the problem, the Commission issued a detail report, recommending equal medical and dental care for all eligible dependents of military personnel, wherever located. The report pointed out that 40 per cent of military dependents did not have access to military medical facilities and that 20 per cent of all Service dependents live at least 25 miles from the nearest military installation. Many of those living in close proximity to military medical facilities cannot as a practical matter receive medical attention, the Commission noted, because facilities often are overcrowded in congested areas. The Commission recommended that the medical care program be supplemented by the use of civilian facilities.

- Because the Commission's recommendations were made late in the first session of the 83d Congress, proposed legislation was not introduced until the following year and failed to be enacted before dissolution of the 83d Congress.

- Re-introduced in the 84th Congress, the measure was referred to the Armed Services Committees and underwent many weeks of hearings before it was finally enacted. It became effective on 7 December 1956.

- As approved by the Congress the Medicare plan was designed principally to provide medical attention for 40 per cent of military dependents who did not have access to military hospitals. However, upon recommendation of the American Medical Association, a "free choice" provision was written into the legislation to give all military dependents the right to elect treatment in either a military or civilian hospital.

- The President's signature on the bill was hardly dry before the House Appropriations Committee began urging the Defense Department to limit the "free choice" provision. The Department said its experience with the Act (which had been in effect only a few months) was

DIRECTOR TO RETIRE

Maj. Gen. Paul I. Robinson, MC, USA, Executive Director of the Dependents Medical Care Division, Office of the Army Surgeon General, will retire 31 August after more than 30 years service.

He was given the mission of implementing the Family Care Program, which went into effect on 7 December 1956.

General Robinson will be succeeded in the top Medicare post by Col. Floyd L. Wergeland, USA, former Chief of Personnel for the Army Surgeon General.

In another medical officer shift, the Army said this week that Brig. Gen. Carl W. Temple, Commanding General of the Valley Forge Army Hospital, Pa., will be assigned to the Office of the Army Surgeon General on 1 September.

not then adequate to effect a major change in the plan.

- In May of this year, the House Appropriations Committee again expressed the belief that a limitation should be imposed on the "free choice" provision, charging that military medical facilities "are not being used to their optimum economic capacity."

- Strangely, the Committee's own report shows that only 1,000 dependent-occupied-beds in military hospitals were vacated during the first year of operation of the Medicare Act.

- However, to enforce its recommendation, the Committee set a $60 million ceiling on Medicare expenditures for fiscal '59, and the action was upheld by the House and by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

- Because thousands of Medicare bills are outstanding at all times, the Defense Department already owes about $20 million which will have to be paid out of this year's funds. This means that the Armed Services, in the final analysis, will have only about $40 million remaining to take care of the medical needs of dependents who cannot be cared for in military facilities.

- Those who oppose the budget limitation point out that since the original program was designed to cost about $76 million just for dependents who did not have access to military facilities, almost half of this number (or 20 per cent of all Armed Forces dependents) will be left exactly where they were before passage of the Medicare Act—without any Government-paid medical attention.

- Dr. Hugh H. Hussey, Dean of the Georgetown University School of Medicine, and a trustee of the American Medical Association, testified before the Senate Appropriations Committee that the House Expert Questions Legality Of Navy Recommendation Accepted By President

A top Congressional Counsel has questioned the legality of a Navy ruling which caused President Eisenhower to order a former officer dropped from the retired rolls.

Testimony taken behind closed doors more than a year ago but just released by the House Armed Services Committee shows that the statute on which the action was based may not apply to retired officers of the Armed Forces.

Similar questions were raised about the Navy's right to deprive a retired officer of his retired pay following disenrollment.

Armed Services Committee Counsel John R. Blandford, after reading into the record the statute on which the Navy decision was based, said:

"I submit that the statute, by and of itself, on the theory of the strict interpretation of criminal statutes, may not be applied to retired officers."

Blandford, a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps Reserve, is recognized as one of the Government's foremost experts on military personnel legislation.

The Navy Judge Advocate General, RAdm. Chester C. Ward, told the Kilday Armed Services Subcommittee, which held the hearings, that the Navy has always "construed" the statute to apply to retired officers.

Admiral Ward, Secretary of the Navy Thomas S. Gates and VAdm. James L. Holloway, jr., then Deputy CNO for Personnel, were called before the Committee to explain the Navy action.

An investigation of the disenrollment procedure was directed by Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the full Armed Services Committee following THE JOURNAL's disclosure of the case, which involved Cdr. Robert B. Rueger, USN-Ret.

It was revealed during the hearing that the Rueger case was only one of several such cases in which the Navy has sought and obtained Presidential orders for disenrollment of officers. No other Service has taken such action.

The section of the Uniform Code of Military Justice which the Navy has cited as its authority in disenrolling retired officers reads:

"No officer shall be dismissed from any of the Armed Forces except by sentence of a general court-martial, or in continuation thereof, or in time of war, by order of the President; but the President may at any time drop from the rolls of any Armed Force, any officer who has been absent without authority from his place of duty for a period of two months or more, or who, having been found guilty by the civil authorities of any offense, is finally sentenced to confinement in a Federal or State penitentiary or correctional institution."

Mr. Blandford told the top Navy officials: "The reference to the words 'from his place of duty' indicates that the intent of this statute was to be applicable only to active-duty personnel." He asked if there has "ever been a court decision that this statute is applicable to retired officers, on the nature of the theory that this is a criminal statute and must be strictly construed?"

Admiral Ward said the Navy had "found none."

Secretary Gates, however, told the committee: "There is not in my opinion any sound basis for differentiating between active and retired officers in the dropping from the rolls statute. Both classes of officers hold positions of honor and trust. Both have been for over hundred years, at least, continually subject to trial by court-martial. Both should therefore be equally subject to the action of dropping from the rolls a situation where it is not practical to try them before court-martial."

Admiral Ward said a court-martial would have been "double jeopardy" the Rueger case.

On the question of forfeiture of pay for those officers who are dropped from the rolls, Secretary Gates said there is no law which provides for termination of pay, although "one Court of Claims case—Allen v. the United States—decided in 1950, seems to assume that the termination of the status carries with it termination of pay, but the issue was not argued before that court."

Admiral Ward added, however, that disbursing officers "in the absence of clear ruling to the contrary, are compelled in the interests of self-protection to refuse to continue retired pay on them they are informed that the retired status has been terminated."

Upon further questioning by Chairman Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.), Secretary Gates said the pay problem "needs legislation and clarification by the Congress."

Admiral Ward told the committee that the right to retired pay becomes "a vested right" on the date of retirement. Both he and Secretary Gates said there was no question but what Rueger had vested right to his retired pay. Secretary Gates said "he earned his retired pay with faithful service."

At the conclusion of the closed-door session, Counsel Blandford told the Navy officers the question of terminating retired pay "could well go to the Court of Claims right now and perhaps they might win their case and they could prove there is no provision here to take away a vested retirement pay."

Following later open hearings on the same subject, the Armed Services Committee approved and the House passed legislation restoring Rueger's retired pay and preventing the loss of retired pay in future disenrollment cases, except during periods of confinement when all or part of the pay could go to the officer's family.

Senate action on the bill is still pending.

Amplified Starlight Aids Combat Troops

A night vision device, known as the "Cascaded Photosensitive Image Intensifier," has been developed to help troops pick out military objectives in the dark with the aid of amplified starlight.

Heart of the new instrument is two image tubes which work in series and operate through an optical system which focuses light reflected from objects in the field. The first tube acts as a preamplifier for the second which further amplifies the light and presents an image on a viewing surface.

The tubes are powered by a 25,000 volt current furnished by a six-volt battery through a series of transformers and transistors.

The device does not require an additional source of artificial light or radiation.

It was developed by the Army Engineering Research and Development Laboratories, Ft. Belvoir, Va., and the Radio Corporation of America, Harrison, N. J.

The Army envisions use of the instrument by civilians to extend the range and sensitivity of astronomical telescopes, making certain x-rays with a substantially reduced level of radiation, and viewing minute flashes of light emitted by nuclear particles.
